Bourbon—$10 a Quart

Street Sales of Liquor Lead to Arrests of 3

(Three arrested for scalping Redskin tickets. Story B-1.)

Charged with operating a pocket bootlegging business in which choice brands of bourbon liquor were being sold at $10 a quart, according to Detective Sergt. Roy Blick of the police vice squad, three men are to be arraigned in Municipal Court today. They are under $1000 bond each.

The three men, arrested early yesterday on Thomas Circle, where, according to Sergeant Blick, they have been peddling from 150 to 400 bottles of whisky a night, are Chester O. Collins, 26; Albert Goodman, 40, and Harold Hoskinson, 24, all of 1328 Massachusetts ave. nw. Each gave his occupation as "salesman."

Collins and Goodman were charged with keeping whisky for sale and selling whisky without a license and Hoskinson was charged with keeping whisky for sale. Liquor was purchased from Collins and Goodman at $5 a pint, Sergeant Blick said. He said 89 bottles of now scarce brands were confiscated from an airway in an alley off the Circle.

"The brands of liquor being sold by these men are the brands that the public can't purchase in package stores these days at lawful prices," Sergeant Blick said. "We've watched that business on Thomas Circle operate for several nights. Somebody has been hauling liquor up there to keep them supplied as they make their sales. We had hoped to catch whoever has been hauling it."

Van Nuys to Ask Probe

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, announced last night that he would ask the Senate to authorize the expenditure of $10,000 for a thorough investigation of the liquor shortage.

"We are going into this whole question in great detail," he declared. "There is no doubt in my mind that there is something radically wrong with the distribution of liquor."

Van Nuys said a resolution for an investigation of the liquor situation would be called up before the Senate Judiciary Committee today. The resolution has been offered by Senator Scrugham (Democrat) of Nevada.

A subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee will be appointed, Van Nuys explained, to conduct an inquiry into the liquor shortage, black market operations, the prices at which liquor is being sold, the quality of liquor, brands, and other factors in liquor distribution.

Van Nuys said it would not be necessary for the Senate to approve the Scrugham resolution. However, the Senate will be asked to provide $10,000 to be used in employing "competent investigators who know the liquor business."

Byrd Assails WLB; Wage Drive Rising

Senator Says Board 'Surrendered' to Lewis; CIO Renews Demand for Raises

Higher wage pressure was intensifying last night as the War Labor Board was accused of having "surrendered" to the coal miners in their wage demands, and Congress itself was blamed by one big segment of labor for part of the responsibility for higher living costs.

And in the midst of this capital battle of statements and broadcasts, technical and economic experts of the CIO-United Steel Workers were gathering at Pittsburgh to start today the assembling of data to support the union's claim that the "Little Steel" formula for controlling wages no longer is in line with living costs, and to prepare reopening of contracts for upward adjustment of wage scales. (The Little Steel formula permits a 15 per cent increase in wages since January 1, 1941, to compensate for increased living costs.)

Washington developments in the wage controversy were these:

1. Spokesmen for more than 1,100,000 nonoperating rail workers appealed to the public for support of legislation that would permit a wage increase of 8 cents an hour for their workers despite rejection by Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vison of such an award to them, made by a presidential appointed board.

2. Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia was quoted by the Associated Press as charging that the WLB had cracked the barrier against uncontrolled inflation by approving a wage increase for John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, negotiated by Lewis and Secretary of Interior Ickes while the miners were on strike.

3. The Congress of Industrial Organizations news service asserted that Congress has failed to adopt a sound tax system, "blocked effective action to control prices," and, as a result, is partly responsible that "living costs have risen far beyond the level of the 'Little Steel' formula wage freeze."

Renews Pay Demands

The CIO organ renewed a demand for scrapping of the Little Steel formula and "an upward adjustment of wages."

Commenting on a complaint of some WLB members that the board lacked adequate means of forcing compliance with its orders, Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, one of the coauthors of the Anti-strike Act, said the teeth in that law seemed plain to him, according to the Associated Press.

"Why don't they tell us specifically what they want?" he demanded. "I'll face the issue if they will do that. I won't dodge it."

Byrd remarked that he was sorely disappointed that the board had not seen fit to employ a section of the act which makes it unlawful for any person to instigate or encourage a strike.

He suggested that WLB "could at least have ordered an investigation" to determine whether Lewis, the United Mine Workers' chief, was encouraging a strike and observed that "they certainly should

223 Tons of Bombs

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters (Monday), Nov. 15 (AP).—Liberator and Mitchell bombers, following up a strafing raid by fighter planes, plastered Alexishafen and Madang with 223 tons of bombs Saturday morning in the heaviest aerial assault yet thrown against the Japanese on New Guinea.

P-40 and P-39 fighters swept the airstrips at Alexishafen shortly after dawn leaving fires at the expense of one craft shot down by intense antiaircraft opposition. Then came waves of Liberators at medium height, followed by Mitchells at tree-top height to give the enemy a thorough going over.

A strong force of P-47's and P-40's was on hand as a protective cover, but not a Japanese plane was in the air.

Apparently Aimed at Air Supplies

Since earlier attacks on the Wewak and Madang airstrips kept the Japanese from aerial interference with the Australians' progress up the Markham and down the Ramu valleys, it was presumed that a giant assault such as this was in-

U. S. Subs Sink 7 Jap Vessels And Damage 2

Plane Transport, Cargo Ships Toll In Pacific Raids

American submarines in new raids on Japanese supply lines have sunk a plane transport and six merchant ships and damaged two other merchant vessels, the Navy announced yesterday.

Boosting the total of enemy vessels sunk or damaged by submarines to 496, the Navy issued the following communique:

"Pacific and Far East:

"1. United States submarines have reported the sinking of seven enemy vessels, and the damaging of two others, in operations against the enemy in waters of these areas, as follows:

"Sunk: One plane transport, one large freighter, one medium cargo transport and four medium freighters.

"Damaged: One large freighter, one medium freighter.

"2. These actions have not been announced in any previous Navy Department communique."

Japanese ships successfully attacked by America's undersea raiders now stand at 346 sunk, 36 possibly sunk and 114 damaged.

A considerable portion of the enemy's essential merchant ship tonnage is represented in the vessels sunk, although many warships, particularly destroyers and smaller vessels, also are included.

Special significance is attached by naval officials to the destruction of each new Japanese freighter or cargo transport, because the enemy is understood to be so hard pressed for shipping that he is having extreme difficulty in supplying his scattered island bases, and also in maintaining profitable communications.

Naval men say that every new Japanese cargo ship sent to the botttom now contributes measurably to the enemy's weakening

Lady Astor Drags Drunken Yank Home to Sober Up

London, Nov. 14.—Lady Astor, on recently leaving her home, encountered a drunken American soldier, and England's Number One teetotaler literally dragged the soldier into her drawing room and placed him in a comfortable armchair.

The soldier fell asleep. He awakened to find Lord Astor, Lord Mayor of Plymouth, staring at him with somber eyes. The American murmured, "Where am I? Can I get a drink in this hotel?" He could not. Lady Astor told the story yesterday.

5th, 8th Armies Smash Ahead; Foe in Day-Long Artillery Attack

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Germans blasted out with heavy artillery all day long on the Garigliano River front and sent large numbers of fighters into swirling dogfights to protect the road to Rome yesterday, but American troops improved their positions and the British Eighth Army, advanced slightly at the eastern end of the battle front.

The Nazi air blows were the heaviest since Salerno.

American troops advanced despite many German counterattacks in hard fighting in the mountains north and northwest of Mignano which overlook the road to Cassino and Rome.

(Again indicating the see-saw nature of this fierce mountain fighting, the Berlin Sunday communique said the Germans had "lost a height taken yesterday south of Venafro," which lies northwest of Mignano. The Allied command yesterday reported recapture of high ground taken Wednesday, but lost to German counterattacks Thursday.)

8th Seizes Atessa

U. S. soldiers routed elements of two German battalions with few casualties themselves at a point a mile and a half northwest of Montaquila, six miles north of Venafro, headquarters said.

In a 3-mile drive in furious fighting, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army units seized Atessa, 12 miles inland from the Adriatic and 4 miles northwest of Casalagnida. They repulsed numerous Nazi counterblows to hold the town, of 10,000 population, giving excellent observation over the area to the Sangro River, 6 miles away.

On the Adriatic coastal sector, Eighth Army patrols again slipped across the Sangro to test enemy defenses.

Allied forces in central Italy, holding the wrecked town of Rionero, heard explosions from Alfedena and Rocca Cinqueniglia 5 and 7 miles north, indicating the Germans might be dynamiting buildings preparatory to eventual withdrawal. Front line dispatches said the Germans were wrecking and burning these towns as they did Rionero.

Nine Nazi Planes Downed

Allied pilots downed nine Nazi planes in air battles over the western sector and the Port of Gaeta. One Allied ship was lost, but its pilot was saved.

An RAF pilot destroyed two Messerschmitt 109s without firing a shot. He chased them when they went into steep dives at 22,000 feet. He pulled out at 10,000 feet, but the Nazi planes couldn't straighten out and hurtled down head-on into the ground.

More than 60 German planes were seen in action during the day. They bombed the upper Volturno Valley south of Venafro and the seacoast south of Minturno.

Maj. Gen. Edwin J. House, commanding the U. S. Twelfth Air Support Command, announced that his fighters and fighter bombers had destroyed 180 enemy planes, half aground and half in the air between September 4 and November 1. Forty-two American planes were lost in the same period.

U. S. P-40 Warhawks and A-36 Invaders during the same time destroyed 803 enemy vehicles, damaged 297 locomotives and freight cars, and bombed and strafed 36 railroad yards, he added.

Throne Totters

Badoglio Promises to Resign As Soon as Allies Reach Rome

Italian Headquarters in Italy, Nov. 14 (AP).—Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio, who has been waging an apparently unsuccessful fight to save the throne of King Vittorio Emanuele, pledged tonight to "present my resignation as head of the government and retire" when the Allies reach Rome.

The declaration means the King will stand alone against the united front of Italian political parties seeking his abdication once the Allied armies release the capital from the Germans.

Badoglio explained he had formed a "technical" administration because he was unable to form a representative government and confirmed reports that Count Carlo Soforza, pre-Fascist foreign minister, and other political leaders had declined to join any government under a King they consider tainted by fascism.

Explains His Stand

"Count Sforza stated he was ready to give all possible support to my government, but would not take part in the same since in his belief the King should abdicate, the Crown Prince should renounce the succession and the son of the Crown Prince should be made King with a regent appointed because of his minority," Badoglio said.

"Benedetto Croce (noted Italian philosopher) voiced the same beliefs."

The son of Crown Prince Umberto is the 6-year-old Prince of Naples.

Badoglio said he was forced to refuse these conditions on the grounds that no such drastic step should be taken until more of Italy is freed from the Germans.

"When I was 17," he said, "I swore loyalty to the King and I

Red Torrent

London, (Monday), Nov. 15 (AP). Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's northern Ukraine army drove to within 20 miles of the Korosten rail junction yesterday, while Berlin early today announced that nearly 500,000 Russians had broken through Dnieper Bend defenses in a new assault aimed at closing a giant trap on the huge Axis forces in the south.

A Moscow communique and midnight supplement announced the continuing Soviet drive toward the old Polish border, less than 60 miles away, in which 50 towns were overrun, but did not mention the big push in the Dnieper Bend.

A Berlin broadcast, possibly preparing the homeland for a grand scale retreat in the south, said 30 Red army rifle divisions and numerous tank formation had snapped German lines between Zaporozhe and the area north and northwest of Krivoi Rog "at heavy cost" and that a big battle was continuing through the night.

Retreat May Be Under Way

Moscow's silence is customary at the unfolding of each new offensive, and the late German bulletin bore out previous German propaganda indications that a Nazi retreat to avoid encirclement in the south might be impending if not under way.

The northern prong of Vatutin's forces captured Chepovichi, a rail station on the Kiev-Warsaw line only 20 miles southeast of Korosten, upper junction of the last railroad held by the Germans east of the prewar Polish frontier.

The center units pushed on westward from captured Zhitomir toward Novograd Volisk, near the Polish border, and also turned southward toward Berdichev, another rail junction only 23 miles away.

The southern group battering toward Rumania ran into stiff opposition at Fastov, 35 miles southwest of Kiev, but beat off numerous enemy counterattacks. Five hundred Germans were killed in that sector and 48 tanks and 60 trucks destroyed.

In liberating Chepovichi and other towns and villages the Russians said their troops killed 1600 Germans, captured 30 tanks and many prisoners, and freed 4000 civilians being herded westward for "slave labor in Germany."

In the storming and capturing of two enemy strongpoints near Kerch in the eastern Crimea, the bulletin said, the Russians killed 900 Germans. It reported that 1820 more

Bulgaria Capital Reported Bombed By Allied Planes

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Budapest radio reported tonight that Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, was bombed today by "enemy planes, flying in several waves" and that several persons were killed.

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Britain's swift and elusive Mosquito bombers dropped explosives on Berlin last night for the second night in a new series of "morale" attacks on the German capital.

Other groups of the plywood twin-engined planes hit targets in western Germany. The raids were carried out without loss and were the only air activity of the night announced by the British.

The Germans broadcast that 29 Allied planes were shot down when "strong North American bomber formations attempted to raid northwestern Reich territory Saturday," and that five more Allied aircraft were downed in daylight raids on western occupied territory.

Worse Meat Dearth Predicted By Livestock Men, OPA Hit

The Nation faces an even greater shortage of meat next spring than prevailed early this year, representatives of the livestock and poultry industry asserted yesterday, as more than 500 agriculture and livestock men descended on Washington to oppose subsidies.

Statements were made that during the first six months of this year, the Army only received half of the beef it requested and that half the citrus fruits of the Nation are being sold on the black market.

On the other hand, Marvin Jones, War Food Administrator, asserted last week that there will be an abundance of foods next year.

Representatives of all the livestock groups said that should the OPA regulations continue, next year will see the beginning of reduction of herds to the point that it will take many years to build them up again to normalcy.

Shortages will occur, despite what is now the largest population of livestock and poultry in the Nation's history, it was said.

The agriculturists met in executive session at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday to determine the testimony of witnesses who are to appear starting today before a Senate Agriculture subcommittee investigating food costs and price regulation.

"We're getting damned sick of being governed by regulations written by some economist in Washington instead of by laws," stated Joe Montague, counsel for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association. "The Army today is 200 million pounds short of the beef it wants and it is going to get a damned sight worse."

R. W. Beauchamp, representative of the Eastern Shore (Md.) poultry raisers, said feed shortage appears to be growing.

W. D. Farr, president of the Colorado-Nebraska Lamb Feeders Association, said there is now a 15 per cent shortage of lambs on feeding ranges. He blamed high feed costs and fixed OPA ceilings for what he called a "chaotic situation" in the industry.

"Hog raisers are disgusted and discouraged by the way they are being regulated. Someone makes a

'Disclosure of Truth'

Free Press Guarantee Urged As Part of Future Peace Pacts

By the Associated Press

A crusade for guarantees in future peace treaties of worldwide press freedom, on the premise that universal dissemination of the truth would make the chance of war remote, is proposed by Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, in a survey on "Journalism in Wartime," published yesterday.

The study, released by the American Council on Public Affairs, includes contributions from more than a score of leading news executives, writers, advertising men, and others on various phases of newspaper responsibilities and contributions in wartime.

Particularly, Cooper argues for free and direct access to news of all governments, by foreign correspondents equally with domestic reporters, and equal facilities for transmission to their own countries.

"Availability of news at the source," he says, "with the resulting competition in getting it and preparing it for publication understandably, will lead to the disclosure of the truth to all peoples. And it is the truth that makes men free. Governments never have an easy time inciting free men to war. Thus if the truth is available, men everywhere will be free and there will be less likelihood of war."

Although he says it is "too much to expect" that newsmen will sit at the peace table after the present war, Cooper expresses doubt "whether any politician or soldier can have any better understanding of most of the causes of war than accomplished newspapermen of international experience."

He suggests that self-interest should lead newspapermen for the first time in history to unite in demanding a peace treaty clause affecting their own business. Pointing out the possibilities of post-war restraints on newspaper activities and expressions, he says:

Groping for Security

"Affected itself, and groping blindly for security, the American press could well afford to draw favorable attention upon itself through a crusad for world acceptance of the status upon which it has been built. Worldwide advocacy of the principle of a free press and what it takes to make a free press suc-

Apple Products to Cost More Under New Ceilings Set by OPA

The Office of Price Administration, fixing maximum processor ceilings for apple products said yesterday the levels authorized will result in "substantial increases" over 1942 retail prices.

The new ceilings, effective tomorrow for processors, will mean a consumer price increase of approximately 50 per cent for cider vinegar. Apple base jellies will cost about 10 per cent more as a result of increases for concentrates from which they are made.

The retail cost of apple sauce, packed apples, apple juice and sweet cider also will be sharply boosted, OPA said, adding that since these four products will be priced under a varying processor formula, the percentage of increase also will vary.

Represent Growers' Return

The processor increases, OPA stated, reflect the return to the grower recommended by the War Food Administration and approved by the Director of Economic Stabilization.

In another move, further conferences looking toward a single price regulation for more than 400,000 of the Nation's retail stores were announced yesterday by OPA.

Following a session in Washington today with Representative furniture retailers, Byrd H. Gitchell, head of OPA's retail distribution

Distillery to Sell Whisky Inventory To Stockholders

New York, Nov. 14 (AP). –The American Distilling Company in an "unusual and sensational" move announced today it would sell to stockholders its inventory of 245,000 barrels of whisky or 45 million bottles, fifth largest stock in the country, thereby withdrawing from the commercial whisky industry for the duration.

The company, largest independent in the business, estimated book value of the stock at eight million dollars, and in a formal statement said sale would be made solely to stockholders of record as of a future date to be fixed under authorization of the company's board of directors. The price will be about one-half the OPA ceiling price.

The firm said it would bottle the whisky for the stockholders and will continue to manufacture alcohol for war purposes.

Riots Spread In Lebanon And Egypt

Mobs Stone French Quarters in Cairo Out of 'Sympathy'

Cairo, Nov. 14 (AP).—Sharp clashes between French troops and Lebanese over the issue of a free Lebanese government continued today along the Eastern coast of the Mediterranean and disorders broke out in Egypt where student mobs in sympathy demonstrations stoned the French committee's headquarters in Cairo shouting "down with France! Down with De Gaulle!"

Egyptian students also stoned a French officer and tore down French flags at Alexandria.

French authorities, contending that the fighting in Lebanon is not as serious as has been reported, rushed Gen. Georges Catroux from Algiers to Cairo by plane to confer with Egyptian Premier Nahas Pasha. Catroux is on his way to Lebanon to soothe the situation.

Before the conference, Premier Nahas said Egypt would use her influence with the United Nations to force the French committee to release imprisoned members of the Lebanese government.

Form "Free Government"

The Arab news agency reported that Lebanese deputies still at liberty had formed a "free government" cabinet and moved to Bikaa to function while their president and prime minister are detained by the French.

From its seat at Baalbeck in the hills of eastern Lebanon, the provisional government was report to have ordered a continuation of organized resistance against the French.

More German Reinforcements Land on Leros

Third Day of Fighting Finds Defenders Split, Outnumbered by Foe

Cairo, Nov. 14 (AP).—Striving to capture the little Dodecanese island of Leros at all costs, the Germans have landed still more reinforcements and in the third day of bitter fighting outnumbered British and Italian defenders, the Allied Middle East Command announced today.

German forces have straddled the island at its narrowest point (1 mile wide) it was reported officially, separating the Anglo-Italian forces in the north and the south.

It was reported officially, however, that the city of Leros, on the east side of the island, still is in the hands of the defenders.

British Gain Slightly

The British made slight gains in the Clidi area in the northeast and the Germans have not been able to establish a foothold in the southern half of the island, it was stated.

Italian troops were said to be holding up well.

A communique said the defense forces made local gains in the northern sector while in the central part, where German parachutists have landed, the Nazis improved their positions slightly.

That the position of the garrison was precarious and the issue in doubt, was indicated by the disclosure that the defenders, although well-equipped, were faced by superior forces.

The Allied Middle East Air Force again gave full support to the beleaguered island by bombing nearby Axis airfields from which aid could be sent to the German land-

Oumansky Hints Russians Plan to Keep Part of Poland

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—The New York Times said in a dispatch from Mexico City that Constantine Oumansky, Soviet Ambassador to Mexico, had indicated Russia was determined to retain the part of Polish territory she received on the basis of the German-Soviet agreement of September 28, 1939, after the Nazi invasion of Poland.

The dispatch quoted Oumansky as saying:

"According to the calculations of certain commentators, our forces are beyond Kiev and 90 miles from our western border.

"I wish it were so. Unfortunately I am obliged to inform you that we still have to retrieve 280 miles in the same direction to reach our frontier with Poland and only after having completed that drive shall we have liberated all the territory of the Soviet Ukraine from the Nazi-Fascist yoke."

Oumansky spoke at a dinner tendered him at which there were several Mexican ministers and political, financial and military leaders.

It was explained, the dispatch continued, that the territory 280 miles west of Kiev was that which Russia acquired after the September, 1939, agreement and included the Polish towns of Vilna, Grodno and Lwow.

Diplomats in Mexico City, the dispatch stated, said Oumansky's statement was the first public announcement to be made in the Western Hemisphere by a leading Russian official of any such claims.

Germans Produce New Rocket Bomber

War Sidelights

Nazis Slay 100 Italians In Reprisals

At the Italian-Swiss Frontier, Nov. 14 (AP).—One hundred Italian prisoners taken from concentration camps have been shot or hanged in Turin in retaliation for attacks on German soldiers, it was learned today.

Several Nazi troopers were killed last week in the Turin and Milan area. The executed hostages were left in the streets as a warning to the population.

Milan is under martial law, and the Corriere de la Sera said anyone on the streets after 8 p. m. would be shot. Many already have thus died, it was said, but terroristic action continued against the Fascists.

Reports from the frontier were that a number of priests in northern Italy in sermons had openly urged the people to resist.

The Fascist news agency Stefani issued an "official declaration" that the church would be respected, but that "all political intervention by the clergy" would be prosecuted ruthlessly.

Army Rest Camp in China

United States Army Headquarters in China, Nov. 14 (AP).—A mountain resort which in the United States would be a millionaire's dream retreat has been opened as a rest camp for convalescent and tired American flyers and ground men.

On a sparkling lake about 8000 feet above sea level, with year-round sunshine and bracing weather, the camp provides boating, swimming, fishing, duck shooting, and tennis and basketball courts. For the more hardy there are mountain climbing and wild boar, bobcat and mountain lion hunting.

It is named Camp Schiel in memory of the late Maj. Frank Schiel, ace fighter pilot. The camp was constructed by the Army in cooperation with the Chinese war area service corps which houses and feeds American forces in China. The lodge has accommodations for 60 enlisted men and 40 officers. The men stay a week to 10 days.

Not the least of the camp's attractions is the food which is the best Army chow in China, since the camp has a No. 1 priority on food.

U-Boat Crews Saved

Madrid, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Spanish news agency Cifra reported from El Ferrol today that two Spanish fishing boats returned to port with 34 survivors of two German U-boats sunk off Staca de Bares Cape in the Bay of Biscay by Allied forces. A third U-boat was reported sunk by a British destroyer which took survivors to

4-Motored Plane Reported Held For Use in 1944

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 14 (AP). Germany is manufacturing a rocket-driven four-engined bombing plane patterned along the lines of American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, a Berlin dispatch said today.

A new twin-engined long-range fighter also has been developed and is being used in defending Germany, the dispatches said.

The new rocket bomber was said to have been designed to make dive-bombing or level bombing attacks on invasion fleets and convoys and is being saved until 1944.

Reichsmarshal Goering was said to have talked to Nazi Party members at Munich for two hours on November 9 disclosing information on the air force's new planes, and to have predicted that the next year would be the most destructive yet in aerial warfare—so destructive that "human beings will wish they had never learned to fly."

The rocket plane is being produced in mass in a Heinkel factory and is so constructed that use of its rockets will permit the pilot in an instant to multiply its speed five times, correspondents were told.

The Stockholm Tidningen correspondent hinted the plane may already have been used over London.

It was said to be equipped with only half the number of guns of American four-engined bombers, but was said to be armed with a sensational new weapon which equalized the firepower of the Flying Fortresses and Liberators.

The Messerschmitt company is reported to be producing the new fighter, described as a machine which can carry two-ton bomb loads and fly to Scotland without a reserve fuel tank.

The emphasis Nazi leaders have placed recently on "secret weapons" also has led to talk among German army officers and civilians of gas warfare.

Many Nazi officers are predicting the use of gas because it is a defensive weapon and the high command may fall back on it in desperation to keep Allied armies from lunging into the heart of Germany, these reports said.

Frequent reports recently have held that Germany is experimenting with new types of gas and to be camouflaging the odors in the hope of baffling Allied experts when gas is used.

Nazis Proclaim State of Alarm In Jutland

Stockholm, Nov. 14 (AP).—It was officially announced in Copenhagen tonight that the Germans have proclaimed a "state of highest alarm" in Jutland. No reasons were given.

A dispatch said martial law might follow, presumably as a result of spreading sabotage.

It was recalled that Gen. Hermann von Hannecken, commander of German forces in Denmark, recently transferred his headquarters from Copenhagen to Silkeborg in Jutland.

disturbances, but reported a student demonstration at Damascus, the capital of Syria, and acknowledged some fighting and continued "manifestations" at the Lebanese capital of Beirut.

There was no question about the determination of the student demonstrators here. The grounds about the headquarters of the French committee were littered with broken glass. Stones and name plates were ripped from doors. The building remained tightly-shuttered today.

Protests against the French were coming in from other parts of the Arab world. Rports from Bagdad said Iraq's parliament at a special meeting today adopted a resolution protesting the French stand.

(In New Delhi, India, the All-India Moslem League adopted a resolution concerning "the grave situation" in Lebanon, urging the British Government to act immediately to restore normal conditions and obtain the country's full independence.

(Another resolution, addressed to Britain and other Allies, asked that North African countries freed from Italian control be made sovereign states. It recommended abolition of mandates and appealed to the United Nations to urge France to liberate Morocco, Algeria and Tunis.

Designation of Catroux to settle the difference, following a virtual threat by the British government to seize control in Lebanon unless the French maintain peace, was viewed as a step toward the French National Committee's disavowal of the action taken by its Lebanese representative, Jean Helleu, in arresting the government chiefs.

A committee spokesman had said earlier at Algiers that Helleu acted on his own initiative in making the arrests when Lebanon's Chamber of Deputies voted to set Lebanon up as an independent republic and to repeal all constitutional articles giving French rights over the country.

War Cuts Suicide Rate in Britain

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Nov. 14.—Suicides have declined in Britain because even the saddest are waiting to learn when and how the war is going to end, according to Dr. W. H. Davison, coroner of Birmingham, where suicides have dropped by one-third since 1939.

Interest in the war, he said, keeps people's minds off personal worries. "It is an antidote to the inclination of some people at some time or other to lose interest in life."

Mobile Paper Has Fire

The Mobile (Ala.) Press Register, a morning and evening newspaper, of which George M. Cox is editor, was damaged by a $100,000 blaze over the weekend, it was learned here last night. G. J. Flourney said the paper would be published at a plant in New Orleans.

died in the Pripet Marshes south of Rechitsa, where 11 more villages were seized by units outflanking Gomel.

Hundreds of thousands of Germans are anchored in the Dnieper bend and along the lower Dnieper. Three Russian armies moving against them form the southern pincers of the trap which General Vatutin's forces are creating in the northwest with their strides toward Poland and Rumania.

The capture of Zhitomir already effectively had split Germany's northern and southern Ukraine armies.

Horses Plus Armor

The horse plus armor sweep of the Russians toward the Polish and Rumanian borders moved ahead with about the same speed that carried the Russians 85 miles from Kiev to Zhitomir in a week of steady fighting and caused Muscovites to nickname General Vatutin "Lightning."

In the Crimea, where the Germans were trying desperately to defend the eastern Kerch Phinsula, the Soviet communique said the Russians beat down Nazi resistance and captured two strongly fortified points.

German counterattacks, now numbering about 100 in 10 days, also were repulsed, Moscow said, as the Russians pressed relentlessly against the burning and possibly already deserted town of Kerch. Stubborn defense of that city by the Nazis is bearing out earlier Berlin boasts that the Germans had no intention of evacuating the blockaded Crimea.

Attack on Isthmus

The Berlin radio also told of fierce Russian attacks on the Perekop Isthmus at the northwest corner of the Crimea.

North of the Ukraine in a great battle raging in the Pripet Marshes south of Rechitsa the Russians wrested 11 more towns from the Germans, widening the big wedge on the west side of the Dnieper, and developing their efforts to bottle up the Germans holding out in the lower White Russian citadel of Gomel.

The Russians were reported within 15 miles of Rechitsa, 28 miles west of Gomel. Other Red army units for weeks have been holding Gomel's outskirts, standing across the river from the city on the east bank of the Sozh River.

The Russians have killed more than 5000 Germans and wrecked 150 enemy tanks in the last four days' fighting south of Rechitsa. Moscow dispatches said the Soviet aim was not only to flank and seize Gomel, which is the lower anchor of the German line in White Russia, but also to strike westward and take Kalinkovichi to further divide Germany's armies in Russia.

Nation's Sheriff's Will Discuss Deliquent Youth

Juvenile delinquency and other wartime problems will be discussed by the Nation's sheriffs at a convention of the National Sheriffs Association, starting at the Willard Hotel Thursday morning.

William S. Souter, president, yesterday predicted passage of a "strong resolution by the sheriffs condemning the use of county jails for juvenile detention."

Other conference subjects will include a discussion of the recent Supreme Court decision which reversed a murder conviction because the defendant was held by police longer than 24 hours prior to his arraignment before a United States commissioner; fingerprinting of all persons over 16, as provided in a pending bill for civilian identification, and other wartime problems.

Charles J. Hahn, law enforcement consultant to the Social Protection Division of the Federal Security Agency, is executive secretary of the association, which maintains headquarters at the Transportation Building.

Rep. La Follette Warns Labor To Clean House

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 14 (AP).—Unless the labor movement begins to practice real democracy in its union affairs and in the field of politics and government, it will permit its leaders, whom it has not curbed to date," to lead America into one of the most vicious class civil wars the world has ever known, Representative Charles La-Follette, Evansville, Ind., Republican, declared here today at the new headquarters of Local 705, United Automobile Workers, CIO, which was dedicated.

Representative LaFollette warned labor that it will not make headway toward its announced goal of bringing about economic democracy in America without the use of force or coercion unless "you are able to persuade and convince the farmers and the middle class and the democratic ideals of this country of your capacity and ability" to attain such a goal."

Some Face Trial

Allies Oust 650 Fascist Officials

Somewhere in Italy, Nov. 13 (Delayed) (INS).—More than 650 Fascists holding civil service posts in territory now occupied by the Allied Fifth Army have been removed from office. Some have been arrested and are slated for trial.

The announcement was made today by Col. Edgar Hume of Frankfort, Ky., head of the Allied Military Government with the Fifth Army.

He added that many who hold nominal Fascist membership are being allowed to continue in their posts, since under the Mussolini regime it was necessary to have party membership to hold jobs.

Hume said that among the prominent arrested Fascists are Generals Pontimalli and Eltetto, respectively commanders of the Nineteenth Army Corps at Naples and the Naples territorial defense area.

He also listed Domensco Sopro, prefect of Naples province, and his successor, Acting Prefect Nicolo Spirito, who signed the decree forcing Italians from 19 to 25 years old to work for the Nazis; the mayors of Naples, Capri, Ersa, Caserta, Sorrento, Salerno and other towns.

Hume estimated that more than 30 per cent of Italian civil servants in Allied-held Italy were being removed following careful checkup.

Bitter Fighting Still Rages in Mountains South of Schang

Chungking, Nov. 14 (AP).—Striking southward in several columns, reinforced Japanese invasion forces were thrown back and still engaged in a stiff battle in the mountains south of Ichang after a sweep through the central rice bowl region, the Chinese high command reported today.

The Japanese were reported using 60,000 troops in their many-pointed drive below the Yangtze between Ichang and Tungting Lake and employing extensive air cover, but U. S. Fourteenth Air Force headquarters announced several bombing missions by Mitchells and fighters in direct support of the Chinese.

The Chinese communique said the Japanese had been unable to advance on their left wing near Tungting Lake, and on their right wing near the Yangtze, and that Chinese attacks north of the Yangtze were developing satisfactorily.

In northern Burma, in the area west of the Salween River, the communique said several townships had been reoccupied since the end of October and a number of Japanese captured.

American "Sky Dragons" also hit hard in that area on Friday, a U. S. communique announced, with fighter-bombers bombing barracks at Lungling.

New Delhi, Nov. 14 (AP).—Allied patrols clashed with Japanese troops in the Arakan and Chin hills sectors of Burma, inflicting many casualties, and U. S. bombers in strong new raids slashed again at enemy communications, two communiques declared today.

The Japanese were defeated and forced to retire a few miles above Mungdaw, 60 miles north of Akyab, along the western coast.

Many Japanese were cut down in patrol actions in the Kalemyo area inland in the Chin hills sector some 200 miles to the northeast, with slight cost to the Allies.

Engine shops at Myitnge were blasted yesterday with 37 tons of explosive and incendiary bombs, setting many fires, a U. S. air communique said.

Chungking, Nov. 14 n(AP).—Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, President Roosevelt's personal representative, left today after a three-day visit to Chungking and conferences with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, War Minister Ho Ying-chin and Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell.

Hurley, who declined to tell the purpose of his visit, acts as a fact-finder for the President.

Marigny Faces Arrest on Charge Of Illegal Gas

Nassau, Nov. 14 (INS).—Count Alfred de Marigny, acquitted Thursday of the murder of his father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, faces possible rearrest and imprisonment on a charge of illegal possession of gasoline, International News Service learned tonight.

Four others besides Marigny allegedly are involved in the "hot gasoline" case, an outgrowth of the police investigation into Sir Harry's murder.

Already awaiting trial are the Marquis de Visdelou, intimate friend of De Marigny; Nassau Banker John Anderson; Brice Pinder, agent for a soft drink company, and a Negro truck driver named Knowles.

Violation of the temporary wartime gasoline regulations is punishable by a fine of 100 pounds or six months in jail, or both. Violation of the penal code carries a penalty of anywhere from one day in jail to 10 years' imprisonment.

Under the penal code, the charge in this case is the receiving of stolen property. No individual under Bahamas gasoline rationing rules may possess more than 10 gallons.

Primary Petitions Filed for Stassen

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 14 (AP).—Former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen, now a lieutenant commander in the Navy, became first official candidate for the Nebraska Republican presidential preferential primary next April 11 with filing of sufficient petitions, the secretary of state's office said today.

John B. Quinn, former Nebraska deputy secretary of state, disclosed last month that Stassen's name would be placed on the ballot, and announced that he would be the Stassen campaign manager for Nebraska.

Authorities Hunt Clews to Slaying Of Halifax Farmer

Halifax, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—State and Halifax County officers who spent Saturday searching for clews at the scene of the mysterious bludgeoning of Edward E. Shields, 82-year-old farmer, made no announcement today as to the findings of this investigation.

Shields, who lives alone, was killed Friday by blows on the head, officials said, by a killer who apparently set the home on fire to hide his crime. Shields was believed to have kept large sums of money in his house and Halifax County Sheriff J. Add Tune and State Trooper C. F. Coates have expressed belief that the slayer was after this money.

New German Drive Brewing In Europe, Travelers Say

Madrid, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Nazis are preparing a surprise winter operation from southern bases, probably a counteroffensive in Italy, in the opinion of persons recently returned from extensive tours in Germany and occupied Europe.

They base their belief partly on recent southward troop movements and on Germany's urgent need of a victory for its effects both on the home front and on satellite Europe.

The German hierarchy is torn by inner quarrels, these travelers say, but the war machine has plenty of punch left. They insist the defensive strategy on the Russian front makes more reserves available than Germany had at her command last winter.

These reserves are estimated at 150 divisions. Few of them, the Germans are said to believe, will be needed in the Balkans because of differences among the anti-German elements there. The French are rated as incapable of real revolt, according to the informants.

One industrialist returned convinced that the Germans are producing "secret weapons" in large quantities and storing them for the surprise blow. He also believes, however, that they are no more sensational than Allied improvements of their own weapons.

The travelers confirm reporots that an "executive triumvirate" emerged in Germany after Fascism's fall, composed of Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, Admiral of the Fleet Karl Doenitz, and Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command.

This triumvirate has succeeded in concentrating a great amount of power in its hands for "defensive warfare," but it by no means operates without Hitler, they said.

Hitler, in their opinion, adroitly played the triumvirate off against another powerful Nazi combine, that of Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler and Martine Bormann, Rudolf Hess' successor as deputy chief of the Nazi Party.

They quoted Nazi Party gossip to the effect that the Himmler-Bormann clique of extremists is gunning for Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

They said it is popularly believed in Germany that Von Ribbentrop's star is already in eclipse and that the "blood and force" policy of Himmler and Bormann in dealing with satellite nations is replacing the foreign minister's more conservative policy.

Army in Italy To Eat Turkey On Thanksgiving

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 14 (AP).—United States Army quartermasters today promised turkey, cranberry sauce, real butter and pie to American troops in Italy, Sicily and North Africa for their Thanksgiving dinner.

"Only extraordinary battle conditions can interfere with the delivery" of feasts even to troops in the front lines, it was added. The menu: chilled grapefruit juice, cream of tomato soup, roast Vermont turkey and nut dressing with giblet gravy, June peas, cranberry sauce, boiled fresh onions, candied fresh sweet potatoes, pineapple and cheese salad, mayonnaise dressing, sweet mixed pickles, hard candy, pumpkin or apple pie, bread, butter and coffee.

Spanish Army Leaders Join Monarchists, London Hears

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Confirmation of reports that some of Spain's most influential military and political leaders have formally demanded restoration of the Spanish monarchy were brought to London today by persons reaching here from Spain.

They said Generalissimo Francisco Franco faces a showdown with his principal generals who favor a monarchy. If the army insists, they said, Franco must accept Prince Juan—youngest son of Spain's last King—as ruler and diminish his own status.

So far no reply is known to have been made to the Monarchists' demands, but neither has Franco made any overt move against this challenge to his supreme authority. Most notably, he has not reprimanded eight top army men who joined the Monarchist movement.

Different Groups Unite

These reports, confirming earlier, sketchy information leaking through the Spanish censorship, pictured Franco's opposition as consisting not only of Bourbon Monarchists but also of a strange mixture of Republican masses, middle class Catholics, disgruntled land owners, big capitalists, smaller businessmen and a few young intellectuals.

It was indicated, however, that proponents of a monarchy had more chance of success than advocates of reviving the Republican government overthrown by Franco in Spain's civil war.

Driven underground, their ranks weakened by executions and imprisonments, the leadersless Republicans ranging from the extreme left to the center are largely incoherent and torn by internal disputes.

Movement Acquires Force

But the monarchist movement has acquired tremendous force by the adherence of eight top army men who signed a letter to War Minister Gen. Carlos Asensio. All are members of the nine-man superior war council, highest army body, and all are lieutenant generals.

The general's letter was delivered in Madrid, September 13 when Franco was at San Sebastian reviewing troops. Asensio rushed to him with the document, which said the council consisted of "the same men, with variations in personalities due to some being overtaken by death, who approximately seven years ago on the airdrome at Salamanca invested him (Franco) with the maximum powers of military command and of the state."

"The time seems to have arrived," the document said, "to delay no longer the return to those forms of genuinely Spanish government which made the greatness of our fatherland, those forms which scorned imitation of foreign customs."

This was an obvious reference to Nazism and Fascism which fostered falangist Spain, but now begin to appear destined for eclipse.

Lights to Blaze Armistice Night

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Nov. 14.—The British cabinet has decided that the lights of Britain, blacked out for more than four years, will blaze again in every city, town and village on Armistice night of World War II, it was learned tonight.

The first order to be given in this country after the "cease fire" will be "lights up," and instructions have gone out from 10 Downing Street, the Prime Minister's residence, that street lighting systems, considerably neglected through labor shortages during the war, are everywhere to be put into working order.

Poor Food, Transi Blamed for Much Labor Turnover

Dissatisfaction with food in the factory cafeteria . . . the long wait on the corner for a bus . . . Those are important causes of high turnover in war jobs, the Office of War Information said yesterday on the basis of manpower utilization surveys covering 1300 plants.

Cases where "inadequate community facilities or inefficient factory supervision" contributed to high turnover have been revealed, the OWI said.

The surveys were made by the War Manpower Commission's bureau of manpower utilization, headed by Dr. Frank H. Sparks, President of Wabash College, and most of the studies, according to the OWI, were made at the request of management.

When plants or communities made planned efforts to improve conditions, the OWI report said, the number of workers quitting was reduced.

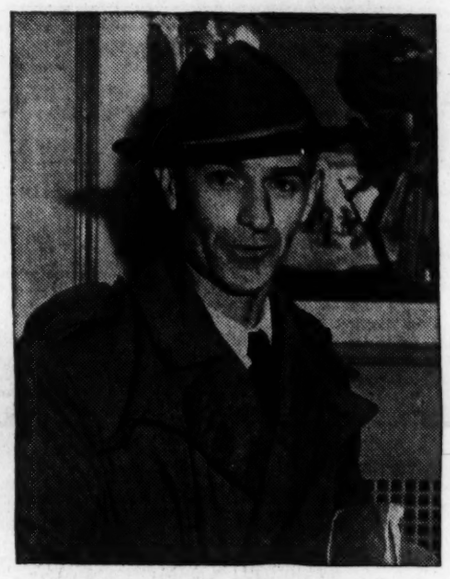
End Race Bias For Ideal Peace, First Lady Urges

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said today "we will never have the kind of peace we hope for" until prejudices are put aside so that peoples of all races, religions and color may live in harmony.

At a meeting opening a fund campaign for the Colored Orphan Asylum of Riverdale, the President's wife said:

"I think gradually we will come to look upon all people as human beings and so be on the way to following the pattern set by Christ—the pattern to live our lives in kindliness to others, and to begin this with children.

"Persons of all ages need to feel that they belong—that they belong entirely. Unless we learn to live in harmony with people of different races, of different religions, and different color, we will never have the kind of peace we hope for."



"Take It From One Who's Been There"

Says Ernie Pyle

To American Women:

If you could have been there for even an hour during the bitter fighting in Tunisia or Sicily, there would be no need for this letter—no need for anybody to ask you to save your used cooking grease and turn it into your butcher.

Here's the idea—your used cooking grease is urgently needed to make gunpowder for the rifles and cannons of our men and our allies. And not only for gunpowder but also for sulfa drugs, vaccines, hypodermic preparations, tannic acid salve to treat powder burns, and for a score of other battlefield uses. Having sufficient ammunition and all these other vital supplies may mean the difference between life and death to our soldiers, sailors and airmen.

Saving used fats is no round-about way to help our fighters. In just twenty-one days after you turn your used cooking grease in at your butcher's it will be transformed into gunpowder or medical supplies.

You are not asked to turn in your used kitchen fats until you've got the cooking good out of them. But after that, every spoonful, every drop is urgently needed. So fill up a tin can as fast as possible and take it to your butcher.

The next time you get a letter from someone you love at the front, or see a newsreel of Allied troops in action or a photograph of American wounded being cared for . . . you'll feel a lot better if you know that your used cooking grease is helping to furnish gunpowder, medical supplies and other battle needs.

Sincerely,

Ernie Pyle

cessful would strengthen the standing of a free press in the United States."

John H. Sorrells, executive editor of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, discussing the general situation of newspapers during hostilities, says their responsibilities are essentially the same as in peace, with more importance.

Pointing out that delicate balance is required of the editor in maintaining proper relationship between fidelity to press freedom and to the interests of the Nation, Sorrells says:

"In no essential has the American newspaper failed to keep faith with the necessities of military secrecy—and there is evidence, which will mount as time goes on, of its vigilance and effectiveness in preserving the essential elements of a free press."

With the support of practically all other contributors to the symposium, Sorrells called the American public "the best informed in the world."

Contributions Cited

Roy A. Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, asserts that historians of the future will conclude that the newspapers' contribution to the present war effort has been profoundly constructive and that if they erred at all "it was on the side of not raising as much hell as should have been raised."

Gardner Cowles, jr., president of the Register and Tribune Co. of Des Moines, Iowa, and of Look magazine (and at the time he wrote domestic director of the Office of War Information) says it is an attribute of free people to be tough enough for any job at hand—"but only if they understand why." A fifth freedom—that of information "everywhere in the world"—he contends is necessary to the accomplished of the Four Freedoms of the Atlantic Charter.

Byron Price, on leave from the executive editorship of the Associated Press to serve as director of censorship, calls truly voluntary self-control by the press "almost an exclusively American institution." He attributes a large measure of the success of the plan to a policy of noninterference with editorial expression and to avoidance of prohibition of publication "unless a definite consideration of national security could be shown."

speech in Washington and the market breaks 50 cents overnight," said Theodore Anderson, president of the American Pork Producers Association.

The livestock dealers state that subsidies will not ease the situation at present, but after the war will cause hardship to the industry as soon as the subsidies are withdrawn. Furthermore, it was contended that subsidies are the first step to regimentation, which is what the dealers say they hope to avoid.

President Roosevelt and other Administration leaders insist that the subsidy program must be continued if living costs are to be held down.

Pork Point Cut Urged

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 14 (AP).—The National Grange convention called upon the Government today to reduce ration point values on pork and pork products as a step to help prevent hog prices from falling below the War Food Administration's guaranteed minimum.

With hogs from this year's record crop beginning to move to market in large numbers, prices in recent days have declined below the WFA's support price of $13.75 per 100 pounds, Chicago basis.

This drop in price, the convention said in a resolution unanimously adopted, will result in "great financial loss" to hog farmers, in a loss of confidence in Government price promises for 1944, in reduced production next year and aggravated meat shortages.

The Grange took the viewpoint that if ration values were lowered during the heavy marketing season for hogs, consumer purchases would increase and packers would be able to find a ready market more nearly in line with the large volume of hogs offered them.

The farm organization also urged that the Government withhold price "rollback" subsidies from packers paying less than the $13.75 support price. This subsidy is about $1.10 per 100 pounds. It was established last June when the Office of Price Administration rolled back consumer meat prices by 10 per cent.

Wage Increase Pressure Rising

not have approved a contract while the miners were out on strike."

"No action taken by the Administration in a long time," he added, "will have the far-reaching and disastrous effect of this surrender to John Lewis when he was openly defying the Government.

"This decision giving the miners a wage increase of about $1.50 a day means that there will be a general increase in wage scales, followed by an increase in the cost of living and then by more demands for wage increase until the spiral of inflation will become uncontrolled."

The rail workers' appeal was in a broadcast over the NBC network by George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and Donald Richberg, counsel for 15 non-operating unions. Congressional adoption of the Truman-Crosser resolution, certifying that the 8-cents an hour increase conforms with the stabilization program, would permit, their prepared speeches said, "continued non-interruption of the railroads."

Harrison declared that a sliding scale of increases of 4 to 10 cents an hour approved by Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson is "theoretical" and "wholly impracticable of application."

Richberg added that Vinson in vetoing the 8 cents award had exceeded his authority and asked why it could be set aside "by a single public official who has had no practical experience in railroading and who has given only superficial study to this problem."

Meanwhile, Vinson, who is expected to report his reasons for the veto today to a Senate committee studying the resolution, received a recommendation for increasing anthracite price 60 cents a ton and soft coal prices about 15 cents a ton.

The increases, which would compensate for the pay boost to miners, were proposed last night by the Office of Price Administration and the Solid Fuels Administration, informed sources said. Operators have been reported seeking up to 83 cents a ton on anthracite and 45 cents on bituminous coal.

ing force. A small Axis vessel west of Leros was attacked and direct hits scored.

Nazis Claim Successes

(The German high command communique declared that "our troops landed on Leros are waging a successful battle against strong enemy resistance."

(A German war reporter who flew over Leros described heavy artillery duels and bitter fighting.

(A Berlin radio broadcast said a German submarine chaser sank a British submarine off the Sporades Islands, of which Leros is one, and took prisoner 1 officer and 13 men.)

Leros is a tiny island 8 miles long and 3 miles wide at its widest point, but in Allied hands could be a threat to the rear of Crete, as well as one of the stepping stones to Greece. Deep inlets cutting into the island complicated the defenders' task.

Badoglio Promises to Resign

will keep faith as long as I live."

When Badoglio resigns, the King, according to the constitution, must try to form a government and the Allies insist that it be a democratic representative government. All political parties have united on the ground that they will not join any government under the King, which leaves him nothing to do but abdicate in favor of a regency, for his grandson to save the House of Savoy.

Asked if he might come back into a new government, Badoglio replied, "I do not like to make plans that far ahead."

The marshal has been mentioned as a possible regent for the Prince of Naples.

Badoglio confirmed that Gen. Mario Roatta had resigned as chief of staff of the Italian army, following a protest from the Yugoslavs that he wa sa war criminal, and said that Gen. Vittorio Ambrosio, who is chief of staff now and who has similarly been accused by the Yugoslavs, is "deciding what to do."

He said about 100 Fascist officials had been arrested and imprisoned on various charges, but that repeal of all Fascist laws would be a slow job, since in 21 years Benito Mussolini had twisted almost every part of the legal code and if it all were repealed at once the government would fall apart.

Gerald L. K. Smith Asks Reynolds' Aid For 'America First'

The former Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, America First banner bearer, who claims two and a half million followers—with 10,000 financial contributors—yesterday came to Washington to urge retiring Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina to carry the torch for America First philosophy on a lecture tour of the country.

The former Christian Church minister said he also wished to confer with "leaders and like minded members of both houses of Congress," the names of whom he refused to divulge.

Asserting that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh still retained views similar to those the Lone Eagle expressed prior to Pearl Harbor, the self-confessed friend of Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana and Senator Reynolds maintained that the America First movement had gained such momentum that Lindbergh would be received with tumultuous acclaim if he went on a lecture tour now.

Smith blasted at the internationalism of the present administration and Wendell Willkie, Republican. He asserted that the threat of an insurgent movement on the part of America First had resulted in the Mackinac Island conference of the Republican Party.

Bard Reports Fleet Has 800 Fighting Ships

New York, Nov. 14 (INS).—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard declared today that the American fleet has more than 800 fighting ships after all losses, transfers to other nations and conversions to noncombat types have been computed.

Bard, in an address to the Catholic Men's League of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, compared today's gigantic Navy to the 383 warships which made up the first line of defense three years ago.

The Assistant Secretary stated that since the middle of 1940 the shipyards of the Nation have turned out 23,000 new naval vessels of all types—ranging from battleships to small landing craft.

In June of this year, he said, the Navy received almost 1200 newly completed vessels of all types, contrasted to the five it received in July, 1940.

Navy Got 2000 Planes

He continued that more than 2000 warplanes were obtained by the Navy last September, as compared to 25 in July, 1940.

"Betweeen these dates," said Bard, "the Navy built 2,200,000 tons of combat ships; added to its air arm 23,000 planes and completed $6,500,000,000 of shore facilities."

Bard asserted that the air arm of the Navy today is far beyond 18,000 planes, after "transferring to other agencies and writing off for obsolescence more than 9000 planes."

Navy fighter planes, he continued, fire five times the weight of projectiles in one minute that their 1940 predecessors fired in the same time, while a battleship's antiaircraft fire is 100 times what it was three years ago.

He disclosed that torpedo production last month alone equalled the entire torpedo production of the first World War.

Tribute to Shipbuilders

Bard paid high tribute to the builders of the ships that are fighting the war.

"Builders today have shown great energy and inventiveness," declared Bard.

"New ships such as the landing craft used for invasions in Africa, Sicily, Italy and the Pacific Islands, the destroyer escorts and the converted carriers to fight the U-boats have been both designed and built since the war began.

"All our larger ships of the fleet had to be refitted with increased antiaircraft guns—until the now famous South Dakota is known to have chalked up a record of 32 Jap planes shot down in one action, combining the ability to fight off air attack with the ability to attack enemy surface units.

"Some of the ships you've built have altered the course of the war."

8 Warships Launched in Day in U. S.

By the Associated Press

Eight fighting ships came off the ways of the Nation's shipyards yesterday, six being launched in pairs at three East Coast yards and two hitting the water on the West Coast.

The launchings pointed up Secretary Knox's statement several months ago that the Navy this year would double the number of ships it had at the end of 1942.

The USS McGowan and the USS McNair became the nineteenth and twentieth destroyers to be launched this year at the Kearny, N. J., yard of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co.

The McGowan was named for the late Rear Admiral Samuel McGowan of Laurens, S. C., World War I Navy paymaster general, and the McNair for the late Rear Admiral Frederick Vallette McNair of Abington, Pa., a former Navy Academy superintendent.

In the same company's yards at nearby Port Newark, N. J., the destroyer escorts O'Neill and Bronstein hit the water of Newark Bay. They were named for the late Ensign William Thomas O'Neill, jr., of Glenbrook, Conn., and the late Lieut. Ben Richard Bronstein of Manchester, N. H.

For the second time this month a double launching of submarines took place at Groton, Conn., plant of the Electric Boat Co., when the Cavalla and the Barbel slid into the Thames River.

Mrs. Merrill Comstock of Washington, D. C., wife of Capt. Comstock, attached to the Office of Naval Operations, sponsored the Cavalla.

The USS Brownsville, a frigate named for the Texas city, was christened at Henry J. Kaiser's Permanent Metals Corp. yards, Richmond, Calif.

The Arthur J. Roberts, a destroyer escort, was launched at the Western Pipe & Steel Co. yards, Wilmington, Calif.

The Liberty ship Jacob H. Schiff, honoring the late New York banker and philanthropist, today became the 241st vessel of its kind to be launched by the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyards at Baltimore.

2 New Guinea Bases Blasted In Biggest Raid

tended to hamper the enemy's aerial supply of troops in forward areas.

The only heavier attack on bomb tonnage was the October 12 raid on Rabaul, New Britain, which received 350 tons of explosives. The previous record tonnage on New Guinea was the 221 tons dropped on Sattelberg last October 21.

There was no new word of the ground situation at Augusta Bay, the Bougainville Island bridgehead secured by Marines on November 1 and reported by General MacArthur Saturday as having been extended in all directions.

A Catalina bomber which aimed its torpedoes at an anchored cargo ship south of Kavieng, New Ireland, at midnight Friday reported 10 other vessels in the area. The bomber met intense antiaircraft fire.

Two other ships were bombed by Liberators Saturday evening, 30 miles southwest of Kavieng. Dutch-flown Mitchells sank a 1000-ton cargo ship nearby that afternoon.

Japanese torpedo bombers and float planes caused some damage to Allied shipping in night attacks on New Georgia Island, the communique said.

The oft-bombed Japanese base of Rabaul on New Britain was plastered anew by Allied bombers which struck also at Gasmata on the south coast of New Britain, and the northern and southern extremities of Bougainville Island, Buka and Buin.

A reconnaissance unit from Admiral Halsey's South Pacific forces bombed and strafed the enemy seaplane base on Kapingamarangi Island, destroying five float planes.

Our bombers in a night attack on the Kavieng area of New Britain Island torpedoed and bombed three enemy cargo ships with unobserved results.

In their raid on Buin, Allied torpedo and dive-bombers dropped 50 tons of explosives on Kara airfield, heavily damaging the runway and starting fires in supply dumps and Japanese living quarters.

The Japanese attack on Allied shipping at New Georgia was a night time strike and cost the enemy two planes shot down. General MacArthur said the enemy torpedo bombers and floatplanes caused "some damage."

The Japanese radio, broadcasting another entirely unsubstantiated report of heavy Allied naval losses, declared yesterday naval planes had sunk two cruisers out of an Allied task force south of Bougainville Island Saturday, and damaged a destroyer, a battleship, and a medium-sized aircraft carrier.

This alleged engagement was the "fourth air battle off Bougainville Island," said the broadcast.

Berlin relayed a Tokyo dispatch giving this total of Allied losses since October 27 in the Solomons area; 37 warships and transports sunk, including four battleships, two airplane carriers and 12 cruisers. Damaged, said the Japanese, were 32 warships and transports, including two battleships, three aircraft carriers, and 11 cruisers.

But despite these wholesale sinkings, "the Anglo-Americans have such large reserves in this area that they could immediately form a further large formation of their fleet," said a second Tokyo-via-Berlin broadcast.

branch, will go to Chicago for meetings Wednesday and Thursday with representatives of mail order houses, officials of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers, and a direct-selling group. Sessions have already been held with variety store, hardware and dry goods dealers.

Virtually All-Inclusive

The single regulation would supplant numerous individual rules for various trades and cover the retail sale of virtually every commodity except food, fuel and a limited number of other items.

Based on suggestions made to OPA by retailer groups, the plan calls for a base period or "historical" markup as the overall control for maximum prices in most kinds of retail stores. In addition, there would be dollars-and-cents ceilings for a limited list of critical low-cost items, and fixed, limited markups for certain other commodities figuring in the cost of living.

When the series of conferences is completed, a draft of the proposed regulation will be submitted to an informal council of retail merchants for discussion. Following this, OPA will decide whether to adopt it.

ability to maintain his far-flung island defense system and thereby aids directly American land, sea and air forces attacking such places as Rabaul.

The plane transport reported sunk was not further identified by the Navy and there was a question as to exactly what sort of ship was meant by that term, although a spokesman carefully explained that it was not an aircraft carrier or a combat aircraft tender.

It might be either a regular merchant ship loaded down with planes or a seaplane carrier. The Japanese have used float planes extensively both in the North and South Pacific. They are short-range craft and to haul them about over the ocean the Japanese had special merchant-type ships equipped with cranes and catapaults and presumably with supply and repair facilities.

Bride-Elect Hurt In Auto Crash, Weds in Hospital

Montgomery General Hospital nurses and doctors saw a demonstration of "love finds a way" yesterday when June Tiernan of Uniontown, Pa., and Sergt. Robert Metz of Fort Meade were married. The bride was bedridden from injuries suffered in an automobile accident while en route to wed the soldier.

Miss Tiernan, 24, and her maid of honor, Caroline Voelker, crashed into a tree near Gaithersburg, Md., Thursday morning while on their way to meet Sergeant Metz. Instead of a wedding planned, Miss Tiernan was taken to the hospital and Sergeant Metz rushed to her side.

Yesterday love found a way and the two were married by the Rev. Frank Tyer, pastor of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Mabel Tiernan, mother of Mrs. Metz, attended the ceremony.

Yugoslavs Seize 2 Railway Centers

Foes' Supply Lines Dealt Heavy Blow; Nazis Get Isles

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Yugoslav Partisans announced today a crippling blow to Hitler's inland Balkans communications with capture of two rail centers just across from the Hungarian border, while Berlin claimed the occupation of three Adriatic islands in the battle for the Balkans' offshore approaches.

A broadcast communique from Gen. Josip (Drug Tito Broz's headquarters said Croat guerillas had seized Koprivnica on the main railroad from Budapest to the Adriatic by way of Zagreb, and Virovitica on a branch running to Belgrade in one of the Partisans' biggest strikes in weeks.

The twin successes severed two arteries over which the Germans have been moving troops and supplies, and followed disruption of other segments of the invaders' meager communications to the south.

One of the guerillas' biggest hauls in prisoners and booty also was reported, the communique listing 900 officers and men taken captive. Booty at Virovitica included five guns, 20 machine guns, 300 mines and 500,000 rounds of ammunition, the Partisans said.

"Defensive fighting" continues in Slovenia, the bulletin added.

On the western Balkan flank, German broadcasts said Nazi troops had seized the Adriatic islands of Cherso, Vaglia, and Lussen, which guard the Fiume naval base and are links in the island chain extending down the Dalmatian Coast.

All three islands apparently were garrisoned by Italians. Berlin said they fell after "short resistance."

The German Sunday communique declared 3600 guerillas had been killed and 4500 captured during several weeks of fighting northeast of Fiume. Thiry supply depots and a quantity of heavy artillery were reported seized.

Cleric's View

Disarmament Seen Prime World Need

The Rev. T. L. Bouscaren, S. J., said yesterday that "disarmament is the touchstone of the will to peace."

In an address over NBC on the National Catholic Hour, he contended that arms limitations "is not a purely technical problem—it is above all a moral problem, and its first step in its solution is to remove the causes that lead to war."

Discussing the necessary steps which he said must be taken before disarmament, he declared:

"First, we must remove the causes of disagreement by justice and sincerity in international dealings; secondly, we must cooperate in building juridicial institutions, which, without destroying the sovereignty of the different nations, will unite them for the purpose of international security against aggression."

Father Bouscaren is professor of cannon law at West Baden College, West Baden, Ind. The National Council of Catholic Men, of which Edward J. Heffron is executive secretary, sponsored the broadcast.

Lewis Denies Responsibility In Tax Case

The possibility of any grand jury action against him for alleged complicity in the reported income tax evasion of a mine owner was brushed aside yesterday by John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers of America president.

The union leader simply asserted he had paid his own personal tax and was not responsible for what others may have done.

His statements were in answer to questions resulting from a news article in The Post yesterday morning, which asserted that the Department of Justice would make a decision very soon as to whether or not a grand jury would be asked to probe reports that Lewis had contribute funds to a mine owner and which the owner in turn did not report.

"I have very little to say on the tax story," Lewis said over the telephone, "and I will not grant a personal interview.

"I have paid my income tax and I am not responsible for those of any other person."

Gerald L. Wallace, Assistant Attorney General, previously said the Department of Justice was considering data received from the Treasury Department covering an alleged transaction in which Lewis was said to have been involved.

When Lewis' attention was called to that phase of the inquiry he refused to comment and repeated: "I have paid my income tax."

200 Army Vehicles To Relieve D. C. Yule Mail Rush

Two hundred Army vehicles, requested to handle anticipated heavy loads during the Christmas holidays, were promised to the District Postoffice yesterday by Third Service Command headquarters.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general, said the War Department had authorized loan of Army trucks to postoffice in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, with availability to be determined by commanding officers.

The Postoffice Department will maintain and service the vehicles during the rush season. The volume of mail in the District is already greater than last year, officials stated.

Meanwhile, Postmaster Vincent C. Burke urged holiday gift and card mailers to sen Christmas mail out this month, to lighten the burden in December and assure preholiday delivery.

500 Million First Ante by U. S. In United Nations Relief Pool

By International News Service

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 14.—Congress will be asked for an appropriation of about 500 million dollars as the opening American ante in the United Nations relief and rehabilitation pool.

The size of the expected request was authoritatively established at the UNRRA conference tonight when it simultaneously became known that present plans call for a total United States contribution of one and a half billion dollars.

The overall American cost for world aid after this war may not run higher than one billion dollars, in contrast to the two and a half billion dollars it cost the United States for European relief after the First World War, it was pointed out.

The United States share, it developed, is expected to be slightly less than half the aggregate which all the United Nations are expected to put into the pool.

Costs to Be Prorated

Earlier it was learned that Director General Herbert H. Lehman of UNRRA is supporting a plan to determine exact ratio of costs for each country that would call for contributions amounting to 1 per cent of the various nations' income on a 1940 basis.

This formula was discussed at an informal meeting of United States financial experts today and may be presented to the finance committee of UNRRA tomorrow. Special Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Harry D. White attended today's huddle.

It was later revealed that two other formulas are under active consideration by United Nations experts. The first of these calls for a percentage contribution on the basis of foreign trade. The second would be based on per capita income.

Finance Comes First

Financial action at the conference was given first call, it was learned, when technical experts discovered needs were so vast that it was decided first to establish how much money could be raised and then spread it as far as possible.

The plan, however, would require that at least 10 per cent would be made up of food or other relief materials, thus cutting the dollar cost. The Government already owns vast quantities of various foodstuffs, which might be allocated to UNRRA under the arrangement.

The material contribution feature, it is hoped, will allay objections by some smaller nations, including several from South America who believe the 1 per cent ante is too steep. A number of Agricultural countries depending on one principal crop have been caught short since the war started by lack of shipping and in some cases now are surfeited with their produce. Brazil is said to be anxious to kick in the UNRRA pool with as much as 10 million bags of coffee.

More Heat FROM Less Coal!

HARD COAL production this year will be equal to, or above, last year's. But there's less coal for each home user—and that's an aid to the war effort. It means that the Anthracite supply is being spread to care for all old customers and the thousands converting from other fuels.

It doesn't mean you'll be short of heat. With a little additional care, you can get the same heat from less coal. With completely efficient operation, you can get more heat from less coal. The free booklet at your Anthracite dealer's tells you how. Ask him for it—or write Anthracite Industries, Inc., 101 Park Avenue, New York 17, New York.

This booklet gives detailed instructions on how to avoid waste in burning coal and in the distribution of heat. Use it! And pin up this handy condensation of some main points for ready reference in the firing room.

Fuel is WASTED when you:

1 Shake your grate too often, too hard—leave grate bars in wrong position.

2 Carry a thin or shallow fire.

3 Have heater doors that are warped or leaky.

4 Give the fire too much draft.

5 Do not "check" your fire soon enough.

Fuel is SAVED when you:

1 Shake your grates—
(a) Once a day in ordinary weather
(b) Stop shaking when dull light appears in ash pit
(c) Keep a thick layer of ash on grates at all times.

2 Carry a deep fire at all times. The milder the weather, the more ash you keep on your grate.

3 Have heater doors that fit tightly. You are burning fuel to get the heater warm. Leaks work against you.

4 Allow your fire to come up gradually, thus giving your heater the opportunity of "soaking up" the heat from the burning fuel.

Fascist Pattern

The situation in Boston calls for some very sober thinking by the Nation as a whole. That city, one of the birthplaces of American democracy, has recently experienced some of the ugly birthpangs of European fascism. In some of its suburban areas, Jewish children have been singled out—because they are Jewish—and viciously beaten by organized gangs of boys. Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Boston area of the Methodist Church declares that this is no mere hoodlumism but part of an incipient Fascist pattern. "I was in Germany," he says, "when these things began there. It is the same pattern in which organized gangs beat up a scapegoat race whether they be Jews or anyone else."

There have been other recent manifestations of the same pattern. In New York and Chicago, Jewish cemeteries have been ghoulishly desecrated. There is good reason to believe, as Bishop Oxnam suggests, that these actions have a common origin, that they stem from anti-Semitic propaganda disseminated by subversive organizations. A delegation representing groups devoted to racial unity and civil liberties has urged Attorney General Francis Biddle to investigate these outrages and to prosecute those responsible for them; the delegation specifically attributed responsibility to the Ku Klux Klan and the Christian Front. Certainly the situation calls for the closest scrutiny by the Department of Justice and the most vigorous enforcement of pertinent statutes.

Moves In Italy

Since the Allied landing at Salerno last September Allied progress in southern Italy, while steady, has been slow. German resistance has been stubborn, the terrain difficult, and the American and British troops have had to fight for every inch of ground. This has led some observers to reach the pessimistic conclusion that many more weeks remained before our forces would even get to Rome. Recent moves of the Germans suggest, however, that what has happened since Salerno may not be the best guide to what may happen from here on out. Certainly the demolition of docks at Leghorn, 240 miles north of the present Garigliano-Sangro front, and at Pescara, 25 miles up the Adriatic from the British 8th Army, creates the possibility that the Germans are planning a large-scale withdrawal to the north.

No doubt the Germans realize that with the Allies completely in control of the Mediterranean and of such strategically important islands as Sardinia and Corsica, amphibious flanking movements that would pocket the German forces in the south are always possible. In the meantime the fact that Allied air power has stepped up its attacks on German communications through the Alpine passes and the Po Valley indicates that Sardinia and Corsica are now being put to use. The bitter fighting in the south, therefore, may at this stage be merely a German holding operation while the enemy prepares for a winter line closer to the Brenner and the Reich.

The basic political principle espoused by the Allies with respect to the future of areas liberated from the Nazi yoke is that the people of the freed countries will themselves decide who is to lead them and what form of government they are to have. This point was most clearly brought out in the Moscow declaration regarding Italy. But what applies to Italy applies with equal force to other countries now dominated by Hitler.

However, some question has arisen in certain Allied circles as to how this principle of self-determination is to be applied. In the case of Greece, for instance, the question has been raised whether the Allies will seek to "foist" King George II upon that nation. Doubts regarding this point have now been cleared up, however. In the House of Commons the other day Prime Minister Churchill declared that the Greek people alone will ultimately decide their King's future. In other words, they can retain the monarchy or establish a republic. There will be no pressure upon them from outside.

In view of the disturbed international situation in Greece, with the republicans and monarchists fighting each other as well as the common foe, this statement of Mr. Churchill's should do a great deal of good. The question of Greece's form of government can, under the circumstances, be left to the future.

Senate On Trial

There is something profoundly disturbing in the spectacle of the Senate's helplessness in facing the threat of a wartime filibuster. Mountains of wartime legislation await consideration by the Senate. That body has found it impossible to give more than cursory attention to the enormous spending bills which it must approve. Yet it is about to go into a tailspin of irresponsible oratory and there seems to be no power anywhere to avert that calamity.

Sponsors of the anti-poll-tax bill lay all the blame for this threatened travesty on democratic government upon the Southern Senators who are unwilling to let that measure come to a vote. Members of the willful minority reply that they must indulge in "free and unlimited coinage of words" to prevent a breach of the Constitution by politicians seeking votes. Whatever may be the merits of these respective claims, the greatest responsibility for the impending fiasco falls upon the Senate as a whole for permitting itself to be tied into knots by either vote-seeking politicians or filibusterers.

If this gab-fest is permitted to go forward, it is the national interest and the prestige of the Senate that will suffer most. There will be resentment, of course, against those who revived this perennial controversy in wartime and especially against those who are unwilling to let the will of the majority prevail. But the Senate as an institution will be held primarily responsible. And rightly so. For individual legislators naturally take advantage of every device at their command to make their will prevail. The greatest fault lies with the legislative body which permits individuals and factions to make a mockery of representative government by reckless manipulation of obsolete machinery.

The first weakness which the anti-poll-tax bill exposes is the lack of any centralized legislative program. This bill is hurled into the Senate by a single committee without regard for the other legislative business to which that body must attend. It may be called up at any time, and that will be the spark to set off the filibuster. Surely the Senate ought to have better control over its legislative program if for no other reason than to see that first things come first in wartime.

And once the bill has been plummeted onto the Senate floor there is apparently no way of cutting off the Niagara of words that it will call forth. It is doubtful whether the cloture rule can be invoked because it requires a two-thirds vote. And in the absence of cloture, leaders of the Senate can do little more than wring their hands and wail over the low status to which democratic government will have fallen. That will be a spectacle out of which only our Fascist enemies will get any real enjoyment.

There is another reason, of course, why the Senate should stop making itself the football of demagogues merely because they can spin out an endless line of chatter. The very fact that the Senate may talk for weeks on a bill, regardless of its urgency, encourages the President to act on his own responsibility, as he did in the destroyer-bases deal, without consulting Congress. That point is made with cogent emphasis by Roland Young in his book entitled This Is Congress. "If Congress is to share in formulating the great decisions of the day," he writes, "it must revise its rules on debate so that it can participate in these decisions." We suggest that the time which may otherwise be wasted in filibustering be devoted to modernization of the Senate's rules in keeping with the exacting demands of the current era.

Trouble In Lebanon

Whatever else it may mean, the flare-up in Lebanon provides us with a foretaste of the problems which the Allies are increasingly going to have to face in the Middle East and other colonial and semicolonial areas from now on. As long as the threat of a German break-through to the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea remained real and menacing, it was not too difficult for the authorities in the French-mandated regions of the Levant to keep the lid on a pot constantly heated by a mixture of racial antagonisms, nationalist ambitions, imperialist rivalries, Axis propaganda and resentment of foreign rule. Now that the German menace has waned in that part of the world the Syrian pot is again coming to a boil.

The immediate occasion for the flare-up was the action of the Lebanese Chamber in declaring the independence of Lebanon, a territory over which France has a League of Nations mandate. Such independence has long been sought and in 1936 a treaty which looked in that direction was actually signed. But in 1939 the imminence of war led the French government to abstain from ratifying the treaty so as not to imperil the Allied strategic position in the Middle East.

Now, however legitimate the Lebanese grievances against the French may be, and at this distance it is impossible to see the picture clearly, the fact remains that the Committee of National Liberation at Algiers lacks the authority to revoke the mandate over Lebanon and agree to Lebanon's independence. The committee is not a sovereign body but only a trustee, a point which, incidentally, the British and American governments have repeatedly emphasized in their dealings with it. Furthermore, since the Middle East, though no longer threatened by Germany as it once was, is still an area of vital military importance, the Allies as a group cannot permit political developments which would interfere with the conduct of the war. The fact that Lebanon can achieve its independence only if the Allies win is beyond challenge; such an independence would be meaningless if Germany won.

Regardless of the legitimacy of Lebanese grievances, therefore, the French authorities would seem to have acted properly in arresting the President, the Premier and other members of the Lebanese government following their unilateral declaration of independence. The action was highhanded; but no more so than the move which produced it.

Air-Program Control

The regulatory activities of the Federal Communications Commission have up to now been largely confined to control over licensing and business practices. In respect to program content or the general policies of stations, Chairman Fly states, the FCC insists only that broadcasters operate in the public interest and "refrain from selfish promotion of a single interest or idea." However, the time has come when the problem of program control can no longer be dodged. Testifying last week before a Senate committee, Mr. Fly had some harsh things to say about the types of entertainment now on the air. He had on a previous occasion expressed his mind about the commercially sponsored news broadcast that "is peddling ideas to you from company headquarters."

The issue of primary importance is the extent to which program regulation is desirable and how far it can be carried by a governmental agency without becoming a form of censorship that would prevent all free expression of opinion over the air waves.

A few years ago the public interest seemed sufficiently protected against political misuse of broadcasting facilities by requiring licensees to afford equal opportunities for use of those facilities by qualified candidates for public office without censorship of their material. Yet, as we know, even these rules of equal opportunity do not assure political balance in the programs that come over the radio. Politicians in office can reach the public more easily than those who merely aspire to office. Moreover, it is hard to draw the line between political speeches and informative addresses. Mayor LaGuardia's criticized speech blaming Republicans for the election of Thomas A. Aurelio to the New York Supreme Court is a case in point.

However, the task of assuring a fair hearing to both sides in political contests is a matter of policing rather than of program control. Much more knotty problems arise in connection with news broadcasting of the analytical type and entertainment programs that are vulgar without being obscene or appeal to the gambling spirit by scattering lavish "prizes" without falling into the category of forbidden lotteries. Not only Mr. Fly but many responsible citizens believe that these programs ought to be modified or banned in the public interest. But it is doubtful whether anybody knows how it could be done without setting up a kind of censorship that would be intolerable to free-spirited Americans.

The problem of regulation, especially as it affects the news commentator, is discussed by Quincy Howe, a CBS broadcaster, in the November Atlantic. "Give government its head," he says, "and radio becomes a Federal monopoly. Give the radio industry its head, and you get more and more power concentrated into fewer and fewer hands. Give the sponsors who support radio their heads and radio becomes the voice of private American industry. Give the commentators their heads and you get either a babel of irresponsible voices or—much more likely—a concerted drive on the part of privileged groups to promote their special interests in the guise of free speech and opinion."

In our opinion, Mr. Howe has summed up the case for program regulation in masterly fashion. He also lays down certain standards by which we can judge whether the airways are being used to the best advantage and in the interest of the public. Judgment, accuracy and good taste should characterize news commentaries, he says, and there should be ample opportunity for expression of diverse views. But he has no positive suggestions as to how regulation should be achieved. One thing is certain: a regulatory system could succeed only by enlisting the cooperation and securing the advice of the various private groups that, acting together, now decide what the public wants or what they want the public to hear.

HUNTING SCENE

The hunting horn is lifted to the lips
Upon a crest where colors mass in flame;
Behind the hunters, where the valley dips
To distance glimmer fields from which they came.
Before them hounds as soundless as the horn
Climb slopes where only wind has harvested;
By stunted pine and ledges of the thorn,
They seek the trail the red fox made ahead.

The plowman, turning soil to autumn sun,
Observes a russet shadow, from the grass,
Turn into fox upon a wall and run
The other way—and his slow smile can pass
To us more light than these proud hunters see,
Intent upon their own bright pageantry.

Assessing The Blame

By Mark Sullivan

The Coal Situation

Because the coal controversy is not ended, and is likely to recur more or less automatically within 60 days or so; because many consequences in this and other fields are certain to arise—and in the interest of fidelity to fact—it is important to understand just what happened in the latest phase of the controversy. What is said here is confined to what occurred in the latest phase, during the first week in November, and omits consideration of what went on during weeks, months, and years preceding.

It has been said by some, including this column, that the suspension of mining during the first week of November was a strike against the Government of the United States; and this is technically true—but to stop with saying that would leave an incorrect impression. For correct understanding, let us examine the sequence of events.

The strike began at midnight October 31. At that time the mines were in control of the private operators—not the Government. While the strike was against the private owners, the private owners were not to blame. The private owners had been willing to make a contract with the union, and some had actually negotiated contracts. But the contracts had been disapproved by a Government agency, the War Labor Board.

SOME 18 HOURS after the strike began, the mines were taken over by the Government, through an order issued by President Roosevelt to Secretary of the Interior Ickes "to take immediate possession of the mines and to operate them for the Government." By this step, the strike became technically one against the Government—but the distinction is that the strike was not begun against the Government.

In the same order in which President Roosevelt took over the mines, he directed the miners to return to work: "As President of the United States and as Commander in Chief of the armed forces, I call upon every miner to return without a day's delay to the mines. . . . The mines will be opened by the Government on Wednesday morning [November 3]. Every miner will be expected to be at his post of duty, ready to work for his Government."

Inasmuch as the miners did not return to work Wednesday morning, they were now in the position of continuing the strike under conditions which made it a strike against the Government. This status, however, lasted only a very brief time.

Had Mr. Roosevelt confined himself to seizing the mines and ordering the miners back to work, there would have been a clear issue between the Government and the union. But Mr. Roosevelt chose to consider that the miners were entitled to a contract—even when working for the Government. In the same order taking over the mines, Mr. Roosevelt had said that he "authorized the Secretary of the Interior to enter into collective bargaining with representatives of the miners."

DURING two days, the head of the union, Mr. Lewis, conferred with Secretary Ickes, and the two arrived at a contract. Thereupon, in the afternoon of November 3, Mr. Lewis and the other heads of the union directed the miners to return to work, saying: "The Government of the United States . . . has today executed a satisfactory wage agreement with the United Mine Workers of America."

This record suggests that the Administration condoned what the miners union did during the first week in November. But to say that the Government condoned is not to exculpate the miners' union for stopping the production of coal under the conditions that existed.

To allocate responsibility, as between the miners' union and the Administration, would require examination of the long chain of relations between the Administration on the one hand, and the union and its head, Mr. Lewis, on the other, going back several years—a record which includes conspicuous condoning of Mr. Lewis. Persons close to the scene put a large share of the responsibility on the Administration. The periodical Time records that "the Administration finally gave in to Mr. John L. Lewis . . . " and described the public as having an attitude which includes "disgust with the Administration ineptitude." The Washington Post, pointing out unfortunate consequences likely to follow, says "the blame must be put at the door of the White House."

Jobs For Soldiers

Those who suggest that Government jobs be the reward of soldiers when they return probably feel they have dug up a very politically potent issue.

It was Grover Cleveland who first said something about "a public office is a public trust and not a reward for past favors." Certainly the boys want to feel their efforts to make this a better world has succeeded. If Government jobs are to be traded for political popularity after the war, such a pattern is certain to still further put our democracy into ill repute.

Let's reward our fighting men by insuring a better Government after the war. That means selecting personnel on the basis of fitness on other than a political expediency. MARY OAKES.

General MacArthur

By Paul Schubert

Problems Of The Pacific

SO FAR during the war, we have not had to come face to face with the problems of major offensive action in the Pacific. During the months following Japan's dastardly attack, we fought minor defensive warfare in our tragic losing campaign in the Philippines. Recovering from our first shock, we have fought brilliant naval warfare and have won naval command of most of the Pacific. We have fought aerial warfare in many theaters. And on the fringes of the Japanese empire of conquest we have done relatively small-scale "island hopping"—we have recaptured the outer Aleutians, we have occupied strategic points here and there.

Through all this time, the war in Europe has come first.

Now that the war in Europe is going well, so that it is widely predicted that the crusher will be handed Germany sometime during 1944 at the latest, our thoughts turn to the Pacific.

The offensive warfare in the Pacific will be Allied warfare. As a forerunner of action to come, we have seen Lord Mountbatten appointed to the top command post in Southeast Asia—an admiral, a "commando" specialist, a Briton.

THE OTHER man in key command position is our own Gen. Douglas MacArthur, top boss of all forces in the Southwest Pacific. General MacArthur has been out in the Pacific theater ever since the war began. He fell heir to the heart-breaking job of "defending" the Philippines, thanks to the fact that he had been loaned to the Philippine government for the purpose of organizing and training a Philippine army in anticipation of Philippine independence. MacArthur, having had every honor and every high assignment possible to a peacetime general officer in this country, was serving as a Philippine field marshal. Recalled to active duty in our own forces, he was named to the Far Eastern command.

By virtue of his experience in the Philippines, added to previous duties in the Orient at intervals through his distinguished military career, and supplemented by his command experiences in 1941, 1942 and 1943, General MacArthur has become a Far Eastern personality—one of those legendary, adventurous white men who rise to historic place in molding the affairs of the vast Asiatic world of islands and blue seas, rich peninsulas, enormous continental mainland.

Fighting at the head of a handful of brave men, General MacArthur became an American idol. Already we begin to forget how much the deeds of our Philippine defenders meant, back in early 1942. It was an emotional time. In the hour of crisis, MacArthur seemed a symbol of American willingness to face the storm. He had nothing but bad news for the country—but he presented it with an air of dashing gallantry, in the "Custer's Last Stand" tradition, that made him the "man of the hour."

AT THE LAST, he was evacuated—taken to Australia by PT boat and airplane. Since then he has been given the southwest Pacific job.

The America of November, 1943, is not the America of June, 1942. A year and a half ago we were weak. Today we are mighty. A year and a half ago we were sentimentalists about the war. Today we are realists. We have few illusions about the ability of one American to knock over 10 Germans or 10 Japs. It was easy to round up Italians—but only after they quit fighting.

This is a tough war.

Winning it is only being done the hard way—and the postwar job is loaded with headaches, too.

Beating Japan, when we do go over to large-scale offensive warfare in the Pacific, isn't going to be done by the hat trick, but by mass transport, mass troop movements, mass naval action, the setting up of major bases and supply dumps . . . by being stronger than the Japanese.

The man that leads our troops to victory over Japan, is going to have to wield this new America as a tool of war.

General MacArthur is a public figure of great prominence. He has been mentioned times without number as a political possibility in the election of 1944. He has been an American idol.

There are signs, however, that he thinks the realistic Americans of November, 1943, are still the weak and emotional Americans of June, 1942. The trace of flamboyance and exaggeration in southwest Pacific communiques may have been necessary a year ago—at times it rings a false note today.

General MacArthur is not only a distinguished soldier and a Far Eastern specialist whose experience and knowledge are of immeasurable value to us. He is also an American. If he is to continue the Southwest Pacific command through the offensive phase of our war with Japan, would he not now benefit by a long visit to the United States and to the European theater, to get acquainted with the new America whose troops he leads?

Baltic States

One of the wrong points in the Soviet future political plans is the idea of annexation of the Baltic States as mere provinces of its communistic order, as the prevailing Stalin regime already did with its agreement with the past Nazi partner a few years ago. I am shocked to read now the Soviet newspaper Pravda public statement that it is simply natural for the prevailing communistic government to control the Baltic States as America controls California. This simply shows the absurd argument of the Soviet newspaper, since the Baltic States have been independent successful republics after the World War, inhabited by their own nations of Estonians, Letts and Lithuanians, that have no resemblance to the inhabitants of California.

Since I helped the establishment of the Baltic States in a diplomatic way from this country after the World War, I feel my duty to make this public statement now.

In early spring of 1919 I was asked by a number of Baltic intellectuals to get the United States help in recognition of their new republics. I visited President Wilson, who referred me to his Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker. I submitted to Mr. Baker a memorandum and explained the desperate situation of Estonians, Lithuanians and Letts, newly freed from the Russian communistic grip, but who needed ammunition and financial help to insure their further existence. In the meanwhile I had secured American Red Cross help for the starving and sick nations.

After a few days Secretary Baker informed me that he had arranged with the American Army leaders in Europe to furnish the Baltic nations with ammunition, money and other needs. This put the small nations at once on an independent basis and it was recognized by the Soviet government at that time.

I visited in 1927 the Baltic States and Russia, and was surprised to find the social-political conditions in the small democratic republics far more civilized than in the communistic USSR, as I expressed it at the time in my various publications.

The 20 years of independence of the small Baltic States is a historic background stand for their future same kind of political order so that the Soviet government has not any right to claim their annexation now, except in case a new cosmocratic social-political principle is proclaimed in a way of a United States of the World, as late Dr. W. McDowell, visioned in his past prophecies.

Isolationist Attitude

The failure of France and England to keep Germany throttled down after the last war was simply due to the universal human weakness of shrinking from the performance of an unpleasant duty. They thought that somehow or by some miracle they could escape the consequences of their folly—just as we thought our indulgent policy toward Japan would perhaps enable us to avoid a conflict with her. Gangster nations, with a mania for loot and conquest, consider this a sign of timidity or weakness and so conclude that war would be a pushover for them or there would be no war at all.

The isolationist attitude of the United States unquestionably was a powerful stimulant to Hitler to start his war against the European nations. It was equivalent to saying, go ahead; grab what you want; it is none of our business; we won't interfere.

None of the international outlawry that was perpetrated first by Japan then by Italy and finally by Germany would have been dared if an effectively organized world police force had commanded "Hands off!" And to be effective the United States must be a leading member. Instead of curtailing her sovereignty it would increase it, as it would in fact extend her sovereignty (in conjunction with the other members) over the potential outlaw nations of the world, and thus control the international John Dillingers, Hitlers).

Vigilance must be backed up by a world police force of some kind, with the United States a leading participant. No one can deny that the signs are pointing in that direction. Can any rational person contemplate the unspeakable horrors of war and not be willing and anxious to at least give it a trial?

Labor Baiting

Newspapers and other organs that inform or formulate public opinion must be made to realize the grave responsibility they have undertaken when they add fuel to the antilabor union lynch spirit which prevails today. In the stormy chapters of American labor history union busting has not been an unknown phenomenon. Today, however, in the midst of a war to preserve our democracy from the onslaughts of fascism and nazism, deliberate and organized antiunion agitation cannot be passed over as just another episode in labor's uphill struggle. The labor baiters and union haters may yet succeed in busting the unions, but we should be warned that they may succeed in destroying our democracy in the same process.

Spanish Paradox

SPAIN, by Salvador de Madariaga. (Creative Age Press, $4.)

Here we have an extensive revision of Don Salvador de Madariaga's well-known study of his country and countrymen, first published about a dozen years ago. It is one of those instances in which the revised version of a book is of much greater interest and consequence than the original work. A little less than half of this new edition is devoted to the Spanish Civil War of recent and terrible memory, and it is an interesting irony that a Spaniard should be the first to write of that cruel conflict, not indeed without emotion but without discernible bias.

Don Salvador with his historical detachment manages to challenge almost every commonly held opinion of American newspaper readers concerning the nature and significance of the long Spanish nightmare of slaughter, starvation and frenzy. It is, he tells us, fallacy to speak of it as a "dress-rehearsal" of the larger conflict that was simultaneously brewing throughout Europe and the world and which actually burst a few months after Franco's belated entry into Madrid. In origin, at least, the two were virtually unrelated. The Spanish struggle, like most of the numerous civil wars of Spain, was the result of tensions arising from peculiarities of the Spanish character and out of the special composition of Spanish politics. The Spanish war was not, as the foreign journalists and volunteers liked to persuade themselves, a war of Ormazd and Ahriman; it was a war of Don Quixote against himself, representing, as it did, those curious polarities of temper which impel the Spaniard simultaneously toward the separatism and dictatorship which have been the contrapuntal theme of Spanish history. At the beginning, at least, the guerra civil was the contest of extremists who in their own personalities represented the extremes of the Spanish temperament, men who were by nature such extravagant individualists that nothing less than dictatorship—their personal dictatorship—could satisfy them. Don Salvador has called this earlier and purely Spanish phase of the struggle the Battle of the Franciscos, meaning, of course, of Francisco Franco and Francisco Largo Caballero.

Thus the history of the downfall of the Spanish Republic becomes an almost bewildering paradox. The mortal blow to the republic was dealt not by the extreme Right, nor by Rome or Berlin, but by the extreme Left, for actually the republic perished at the moment the civil war began. The Communists, who were presently to employ every device of terror to force the continuation of an obviously futile struggle, were at first all for moderation and conciliation, since a civil war did not suit the current Comintern policy of infiltration and collaboration and popular fronts.

Even after the historic popular front election of 1936, the politicos of all persuasions as far to the Right as Gil Robles and his clericals and as far to the Left as Prieto and his Socialists were prepared to accept parliamentary solutions. Don Salvador's analysis of the returns in that election shows that the Spanish people themselves had voted eight to one against a Socialist revolution and almost unanimously against a revolution by the militarists. How then was it possible for extreme and numerically negligible minorities to carry the whole nation with them into the abyss? The answer would seem to be that it was because these minorities—the Army and the Trade Unions—had the guns.

The great tragedy of the military uprising of 1936 was, apparently, that it neither wholly succeeded nor wholly failed, thus dooming the country to incalculable misery and expenditure of blood. The foreign intervention on either side and General Franco's own military blunders prolonged the martyrdom of the Spanish people. The Rebels, among whom the Falange was at first a negligible influence, were forced to acquire a more and more distinct Fascist complexion. The Loyalists, too, discovered that Moscow's aid had been given at a price and that along with the Russian planes and tanks had come the Russian system of political police. Thus in 1939 the Loyalist leaders found it necessary to fight one civil war within another before they could so much as surrender a hopeless cause.

It is only in speaking of the Spanish Church that Don Salvador, no violent anticlerical, permits himself a trace of bitterness. The persecution of the church he describes as heartless and horrible. Yet he feels that the church, at the end of the war, might have risen to the Christian magnanimity of which Franco was himself incapable and so have opposed his ferocious proscriptions and reprisals. Such a call to charity from the Spanish Church, he thinks, would have made religious martyrs rather than political victims of the murdered priests. Alas, the clergy, says Don Salvador, chose at this moment of greatest opportunity to remain silent and vindictive "like just another trade union, say of sacristy workers."

The Labor Crisis

By Ernest Lindley

Wages And Inflation

AT LEAST three separate questions are embedded in the labor controversy that is now coming to a head:

1. Whether labor is going to stand back of the Government's efforts to control inflation.
2. Whether the Government is have and to use the power to prevent strikes during the war.
3. Whether the affairs of labor unions are to be further regulated in the interests of the public.

LINDLEY

Labor as a whole makes no sacrifice in standing back of the Government's program to control inflation. Labor as a whole cannot really benefit from wage increases which result in higher prices. Individual unions or other groups of workers can make relative gains. Possibly organized labor as a whole can win a temporary advantage at the expense of salaried workers and others on fixed incomes and small unorganized wage earners. But the probability is that in a race between wages and prices, the wage earners will fall behind. Meanwhile the real value of his war bonds and other savings will be declining and he is helping to create a more difficult problem in postwar adjustment.

LAST SPRING it looked as if the leaders of the main associations of organized labor had at last recognized this. In effect, they let up on their damands for higher wages and brought pressure, instead, for more stringent controls of living costs. But labor representatives on the War Labor Board challenged the Little Steel formula which was an integral part of the inflation control program. Whether they should have been allowed to continue to serve on a body which was bound to support a Government program to which they openly objected is very doubtful. Indeed, whether special interests should ever have been given representation on the War Labor Board is questionable.

Within the formula adopted, the War Labor Board has been firmer in its control of wages during the last 14 months than OPA has been in its control of prices. This is the point which William H. Davis, chairman of the WLB, made in his recent letter to Vice President Wallace. Mr. Davis has corrected the impression that he favored lifting the wage ceilings. Instead, he wants prices rolled back to the September, 1942, level and the original wage-price line held.

The wage formula is lopsided. It applies only to basic hourly wage rates. On the other hand, a formula based solely on total weekly earning would have been unfair to many workers.

INDUSTRIAL LABOR, on the average, has not suffered from the rise in the cost of living during the last 14 months because average weekly earnings have risen still more. Labor challenges the accuracy of the cost of living figures, and they are now being reviewed by a WLB committee. And, of course, many individual wage earners, like many salary earners, have suffered because their income has not risen.

Labor would serve its own interests best by mobilizing all the strength it can to win congressional support for firm control of prices, with the aid of subsidies. In the present Congress labor is weaker than the farm bloc, and the leaders of labor may feel rightly that their best chance of avoiding a setback is through an arrangement which permits both prices and wages to go somewhat higher. But this is a poor alternative to holding the line.

AS TO THE control of strikes in war: a great majority of organized labor has observed the no-strike pledge, even though the record is not as nearly perfect as union leaders try to make it appear. But Lewis and the United Mine Workers have wrung benefits from the Government by striking. Others may try to emulate him. Patriotism should not be penalized. Even with the incomplete powers at its disposal, the Government could have broken the coal strike. But its hand would be strengthened by powers of compulsion more practicable and efficient than those conferred by the Smith-Connally Act. The WLB has issued its own warning that legislation is likely to become necessary if other unions imitate the mine workers.

More comprehensive legislation for the regulation of the affairs of unions might be worked out better after the war. But it is overdue, and reforms usually are wrought by stress. There is no sign, however, that the leadership of organized labor reads the signs any more clearly than Wall Street and the stock exchange did in 1933-35.

Many of the leaders of organized labor continue to behave only as representatives of special interests. Their clients are a minority of the Nation, but they are a very numerous minority, whose welfare calls for statesmanlike leadership.

Senators Plan Filibuster on Poll Tax Bill

Jerking back the curtains for a quick preview of the filibuster in the making, two Southern Senators announced last night they are preparing "several hundred amendments" to the antipoll-tax bill, and estimated that weeks will be required for their consideration.

The two, Senator Eastland (Democrat) of Mississippi and Senator McClellan (Democrat) of Arkansa, said they would join "a large number of other Senators from every section of the country" in combating the House-approved bill which would eliminate payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in elections for Federal officials.

They charged the bill is sponsored principally by the Communist Party and "also the radical hybrid American Labor Party in the Democratic organization." It was approved Friday, 12 to 6, by the Senate Judiciary Committee and, beginning today, is subject to being called up by any member of the Senate.

With filibusters threatened in half a dozen quarters, efforts are under way to avoid weeks of random talk in the midst of war. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming believes he has the solution with his resolution calling for an anti-poll tax constitutional amendment.

He pointed out that only eight States—Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Texas, Arkansas, South Carolina and Virginia—make payment of a poll tax a voting qualification, and said it was likely that the amendment would be ratified by most of the other States.

The Judiciary Committee deadlocked, 9 to 9, on the O'Mahoney resolution Friday, but agreed to consider it today. If it were called up and passed ahead of the House poll tax repealer, the latter probably would remain quiescent on the calendar.

Advocates of the bill declare no one should have to pay in order to vote. Opponents say the bill is an attempt of the Federal Government to take over the States' rights to specify the qualifications of their voters.

'Sectarianism' Is 'Sorry Scandal' To Dr. McCartney

Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, yesterday warned that "sectarianism is the sorry scandal of Christianity."

"How it must grieve the heart of the Saviour," he said, "when He witnesses how shamefully his disciples have failed to answer His prayer on that last night about the communion table that 'they all might be one'."

"If only with reasonable loyalty to our various regimental banners to which we are drawn by the chords of circumstances, sentiment and tradition, our various Christian groups could present a united front upon the great moral issues of our time, how it might turn the tide for righteousness," he said.

$25,000,000 Asked

Senate Today To Consider Bond 'Ad' Bill

The Senate today is scheduled to consider the Bankhead bill which would direct the Treasury to spend $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 for paid Government war bond advertising in the Nation's newspapers. Bankhead said he was confident of its approval if most of the Senators are present, and did not appear concerned over an amendment offered by Senator Ball (Republican), Minnesota, to cut the authorization in half and confine the advertising to newspapers published in communities under 10,000 population.

Bankhead took the view that the Government advertising program would be an economy, not an expense, because it would bring about more war bond sales.

Opposition to the measure hinges on the theory that the newspapers would be paid a near-subsidy which could endanger the freedom of the press.

The new tax bill, to add $2,142,900,000 in new revenue, is due to hit the House floor a week from today. There have been signs of objections among House members to committee recommendations for increases in liquor and admissions taxes and for postal rate boosts.

Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee are planning a supplemental report on the bill, raising again the charge of waste in Federal expenditures.

Services Praised On Spiritual Care At K. of C. Mass

"The spiritual welfare of our men in uniform is being well provided for," the Rev. Father A. M. McDonald, C. S. C., of Holy Cross College, told the congregation at the second annual Knights of Columbus Mass held by the Prince Georges Council, 2809, at the Richie Colliseum at College Park, Md., yesterday.

The mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Charles Roach of the Church of the Assumption of Congress Heights, Md. The deacon was the Rev. Father Edward M. Roach, pastor of St. Jerome's Church, Hyattsville, and the Rev. Father George Gingras, of St. Francis deSales parish in Washington, was the sub-deacon.

Fourth degree members of the K. of C. of the Washington General Assembly formed an honor guard and the color guard was supplied by the Maryland State Guard, ninth battalion, and the Hyattsville Boy Scout troop.

Steinbeck Describes Victory Of Plywood Navy Over Bomber

John Steinbeck, who has returned to this country from an assignment as a war correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, resumes today his stories of activities in the Mediterranean area.

The orders were simple. The naval task force was to destroy or drive German shipping out of the sea in the whole area north of Rome. German convoys were moving out of various ports, possibly evacuating heavy equipment from Italy to the south of France. The task force was ordered to break up this traffic.

It is not permitted to say what units comprised the force but a part of it at least was a group of torpedoboats, some British MTBs and some American PTs. The British were not quite so fast as the Americans, but they were more heavily armed.

The afternoon before the attack was spent in putting the boats ready. The gunners had their guns apart, oiling and scrubbing the salt spray from the working parts. The guns on the little boats must be worked on all the time. Even the cartridge cases turn green from the constant splashing with salt water. The American PTs are wet devils. Any speed of any kind of sea brings green water over the bow. The men dress in rubber clothes and rubber hoods and even then they do not stay dry.

In the afternoon the torpedoes were inspected an dthe fuel tanks filled to the limit. The sea was very blue and very calm. During the whole first two weeks of the attack against Italy the sea was calm as a lake and that particular sea can be very bad.

Vesuvius in Background

The British officers and men were bearded with fine great brushes which projected forward from constant brushing outward with the hands. This gives a pugnacious look to a man's face. A few American faces were bearded too, but the tradition is not set with our men.

From the little island harbor the coast of Italy was visible in the afternoon—the steep hills terraced for vines and lemon trees and then mountains rising to bare rocky ridges behind. Vesuvius was smoking in the background, a high feather of smoke.

On the quay, surrendered Italian carabinieri stood looking at the "Plywood Navy," which is what the crews call the torpedo boats.

As the sun went down the work was finished and dinner was started in the tiny galleys of the "Plywood Navy." The force was to sail at dark. Long before dark the moon was up. It would set after 2 in the morning and it was planned to be on the ground and ready for attack as soon as the moon had set. This was a deadly swarm that prepared to go. In its combined torpedo tubes it carried the force to sink a Navy. The little ships can dodge in close and, when the going is rough, they can scatter and run like quail. And they can turn and twist so fast and travel at such speed that they are impossible to catch and very hard to hit.

Just at dusk the motors burst into roars one at a time and then settled down to their throbbing beat. These motors can be quieted so that they make very little noise, but in ordinary running they sound lige airplanes.

Little Boats Move Out

The moonlight night came, and the little boats moved out from their berths and once clear of the breakwater they formed in three lines and settled down to traveling speed. In the moonlight their white wakes shone, and each boat ran over the wake of the boat ahead, and the beat of their motors was deep. On the decks the men had already put on their rubber pants and their rubber coats and the peaked rubber hoods. In the turrets the men set at their machine guns and waited.

On 412 the master and his first stood on the little bridge. The spray came over the bow in long, swishing spurts as the PT put her nose down into the easy swells and the light wind picked up the splash. Their faces were dripping. Now and then the first stepped the three steps down to the tiny chart room where a hooded light glimmered on the chart. (One line deleted by the censor.) The first checked the course and put his head through and climbed back to the bridge. A call came from aft—"Aircraft at 9 o'clock!"

The men at the turrets and at the after gun swung their weapons sharp to the left and elevated the muzzles, and the gunners peered uneasily into the milky moonlit sky. Unless they come out of the moon, and they never do, they are very hard to see. But above the engines of the boat could be heard the hum of aircraft engines. "Ours or theirs?" the first asked.

"Ours have orders not to come close. It must be theirs," the master said. Then off to the port side in the milky sky there was the dark shape of a plane and not flying very high. The gunners stirred and followed the shape with the muzzles. It was too far off to fire. The master picked up his megaphone and called, "He'll come in from the side if he's coming. Watch for him." The drone of the plane disappeared.

"Maybe he didn't see us," the first said.

"With our wake? Sure he saw us. Maybe he was one of ours."

He must have cut his motors. Suddenly he is overhead and his bomb lands and explodes just after he passed over. The roar of the explosion and the battering of the machine guns come at once. A wall of spray comes over the side from the explosion and the boat seems to leap out of the sea.

The lines of the tracers reach for the disappearing plane and the lines seem to curve the way the stream from a hose does when you move the hose. Then the guns are silent. The master calls: "Watch out for him. He may be back. Watch for him from the same side." The gunners obediently swing their guns about.

This time he didn't cut his motors. Maybe he needed altitude. You could hear him coming. The guns started on him before he was overhead and the curving lines of tracers followed him over and each line was a little bit behind him. And then one line jumped ahead. A little blue light showed on him then. For a moment he seemed to hover and then he fell, end over end, but slowly, and the blue light on him got larger and larger as he came down. The rest of the guns were after him as he came down. He landed about 500 yards away and the moment he struck the water he broke into a great yellow flame and then a second later he exploded with a dull boom and the fire was sucked down under the sea and he was gone.

Grade Labeling Asked on Eggs, Canned Goods

Representatives of 13 organizations asked Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson yesterday to require grade labeling of canned goods, eggs and other products as he has for meats.

"Without grade labeling," they said in a joint letter, "consumers cannot even hope to keep their home front pledge to pay no more than ceiling prices for anything they buy."

They said that "if low-grade products are passed off as high grade," price ceilings could be violated by as much as 27 per cent on canned peas, 23 per cent on canned tomatoes and 33 per cent on eggs.

The organizations whose representatives signed the letter are: American Association of University Women, American Home Economics Association, CIO Women's Auxiliary, National Federation of Settlements, Congregational Christian Churches, Beta Sigma Theta Sorority, United Automobile Workers, League of Women Shoppers, National Council of Jewish Women, National Consumers League, Ladies Auxiliary of Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority.

Giraud Reported Given Free Hand In Military Rule

Algiers, Nov. 14 (AP).—Gen. Henri Giraud submitted his resignation as commander during the reshuffling of the French National Committee, but consented to remain on fulfillment of conditions giving him a free hand in directing France's military affairs, it was learned today.

Giraud was said to have given his resignation to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, now sole President of the French provisional government, but De Gaulle asked him to continue as chief of the armed forces.

Giraud, with many of his family imprisoned by the enemy, was pictured as irked by charges that he has Vichy ties.

It also is believed Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower again has reaffirmed his confidence in Giraud, requesting that he stay on to assist in the campaign to liberate Europe.

Plane Rescues Three Marooned at Post

A. U. S. Douglas troop carrier went after them, after they announced that the post was almost out of supplies.

Good Fortune

Good clothes may not, of themselves, bring you good fortune. But Oxford Clothes do radiate the confidence that draws good people and good things to you. In design, Oxford Clothes express the highest traditions of good taste. In execution, Oxford Clothes tailoring has few, in any, peers. This Morning

With Shirley Povich

That was a silly weekend in college football. Ohio State beat Illinois after the fans left the park convinced they had just heard the final gun bark on a 26-26 tie. Wisconsin gets licked by Michigan which uses 10 Wisconsin players. Northwestern scores against Notre Dame by intercepting a shovel pass, the kind that isn't supposed to be intercepted. Army beats Sampson Naval Base on an incomplete pass that is ruled a safety.

POVICH

Not since Cornell was given five downs by an absent-minded referee in the 1940 game with Dartmouth had there been such a screwy weekend. The Ohio State-Illinois thing is worthy of review. The items that were crammed into the last minute of play would defy even the Hollywood script writers.

Picture the scene, with 36,331 fans in the Columbus Stadium and the score tied at 26-26. Ohio State is driving toward another touchdown, only to lose the ball on a fumble on the Illinois 15. Two plays later, Illinois fumbles and it is the Buckeyes' ball again on the Illinois 21. Now but two seconds remain to play. Ohio State tries a last-ditch pass which is incomplete.

The final gun sounds. The fans leave the park, the teams stream to the dressing rooms. But the game isn't over. The head linesman is saying Illinois was offside on that last play. The rules say the game can't end on a foul. The officials call the squads back on the field for one more play. Twelve minutes later, an Ohio State substitute wins the game with a field goal from inside the 30.

At Evanston, Notre Dame was rolling up a 25-0 score against Northwestern. The Wildcats had scarcely threatened to get a touchdown. And then in the last period they got one, on a play rarely seen. Frank Danciewicz called for the safest kind of a forward pass—the shovel pass. One of the charms of the shovel pass, a low underhand throw to an end or halfback coming from the other side behind the line, is that if it fails at least it's tough to intercept. But Jack Harker, a sub Northwestern end, broke through to grab the ball and was off on a 36-yard touchdown sprint.

There were five touchdowns scored in that Notre Dame-Northwestern game, and neither team could kick an extra point. The only point scored after a touchdown was when Johnny Lujack, back on a place-kicking attempt, fumbled the ball and then picked it up and ran it over the goal line.

Harry Stuhldreher, Wisconsin's coach, sent his team out to play Michigan. This was supposed to be one of Stuhldreher's good seasons. He had worked patiently with his talent. But the times being what they are, and the Navy training program what it is, Stuhldreher on Saturday saw 10 of his Wisconsin boys on the Michigan squad. It was not a contest, with Michigan actually easing up to hold the score to 27-0.

Up at West Point, Army was having a time with the Sampson (N. Y.) Naval Base. The sailors were leading Army, 7-0, at the end of the half. In the third quarter, it was 7-7. Army got the lead on a freak play. Bill Maceyko of the sailors, back in his own end zone, attempted a pass. He barely got it away and it fell incomplete behind the goal line. The ruling: an automatic safety that gave Army a 9-7 lead and the ball game.

Lou Little's poor Columbia Lions had a horrible time of it against Navy, which couldn't hold its reserves in check and reluctantly ran up a 61-0 score. Navy's Hillis Hume ran 31 yards on the second play from scrimmage, giving a quick idea of what to expect. But he was tackled on Columbia's 31-yard line. So on the next play, Hume took the ball again and ran 31 yards again for the first of Navy's nine touchdowns.

It was a Saturday on which most anything could happen, and did. Penn got licked on the same kind of a play that enabled Army to beat Sampson. One minute before the half ended, Penn tried a pass from its own end zone, believing that the time limit had removed the danger from the play. The pass fell incomplete within the end zone and it was a safety that gave North Carolina a 2-0 lead and helped win the ball game by a 9-6 score.

Notre Dame-Iowa Seahawk Clash to Top College Games

By Harold Claassen

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Notre Dame vs. Iowa Preflight. . . .

Eight Saturdays of double football victories are behind that single phrase, the national championship hangs before the combatants and a stadium full of spectators will be present at the game's unveiling in South Bend, Ind., this weekend.

Seldom in the past has a schedule—usually made a year in advance of the playing season—provided such a normal climax to a fading campaign.

Notre Dame finished the collegiate part of its 1943 program with eight triumphs by streaking past Northwestern, 25 to 6, on the churning legs of Halfback Creighton Miller yesterday. Now it must face the Seahawks and the Great Lakes eleven on successive Saturdays.

Todd, Frank Maznicki Are Stars

Iowa Preflight, also an eight-time winner, sailed past the Camp Grant Soldiers, 28 to 13, with Dick Todd and Frank Maznicki, a pair of former professional aces, as the standouts.

Although both teams are from the Cornbelt they have met only one eleven in common—Illinois. The Seahawks pounced on the Illini September 18 for a 32 to 18 decision, while Notre Dame waited until October 23 for its 47 to 0 verdict.

A year ago the Seahawks invaded South Bend with a glittering record and were repulsed, 28 to 0, by an Irish outfit that was tied in its opener and had lost its second game.

The South Bend get-together pushes all other games into the secondary division this weekend and also probably will bury discussion of numerous oddities which happened yesterday.

One of these was Ohio State's 29 to 26 victory over Illinois 12 minutes after a majority of the fans thought the two had played a 26 to 26 tie. A penalty was called on the final play and when officials had shooed the players from their dressing rooms back onto the field for a replay, John Stungis calmly booted a field goal. The Buckeyes next meet Michigan and the Illini oppose Northwestern.

Sneaked Off Bench

The Wolverines trounced Wisconsin, 27 to 0, with injured Elroy Hirsch sneaking off the bench when Coach Fritz Crisler wasn't looking to convert one of the Michigan touchdowns and keep a pledge that he would score against the team on which he starred last season.

Navy crushed Columbia, 61 to 0, in a game in which neither head coach was present, Capt. J. E. Whelchell of the Middies, was scouting Army in its 16 to 7 win over Sampson Naval, and Lou Little of the Lions was kept at home by doctor's orders.

Army broke open the Sampson Sailors on the little known ruling that a forward pass which falls incomplete in the offensive team's own end zone is an automatic safety.

Penn became a cropper before the hard charging North Carolina, 9 to 6, in a game in which both teams wound up with minus yardage through the air and Penn State tripped Temple, 13 to 0, while a pair of officials recruited from the stands subbed for whistle-tooters who were delayed by travel difficulties.

A former water boy, Billy Andrews, dropkicked two points as Texas belabored Texas Christian, 46 to 7, and kept pace with Texas A. & M. Its Thanksgiving Day foe. The Aggies downed Rice, 20 to 0.

Missouri lost its first home game since 1938 and virtually all chance for the Big Six title by dropping a 20-to-13 decision to Oklahoma and Southern California, scored on for the first time and toppled from the unbeaten list a week ago, was bounced again. This time by March Field, 35 to 0.

Prokop Manhandles Tulane

Eddie Prokop and Georgia Tech manhandled Tulane, 33 to 0; Duke, which meets North Carolina this week, blasted Virginia, 49 to 0; Georgia found V. M. I. easy, 46 to 7, and Bainbridge, Md., Naval had its own way with Maryland, 46 to 0.

Dartmouth blanked Cornell, 20 to 0; Tufts, for the second time in the 68 years of its rivalry with Harvard, knocked off the Crimson, 13 to 7; and a Princeton guard, Bob O'Hara, did all the scoring for the Tigers in what prediction said would be a free scoring fray but which Yale won, 27 to 6. Ray Scussel got 18 of the Elis' points.

Other games coming up has Brown at West Point, Dartmouth at Princeton, the Louisiana feud of L. S. U. and Tulane, Purdue at Indiana and U. C. L. A. vs. St. Mary's.

Camp Lee Beats Curtis Bay, 33-0

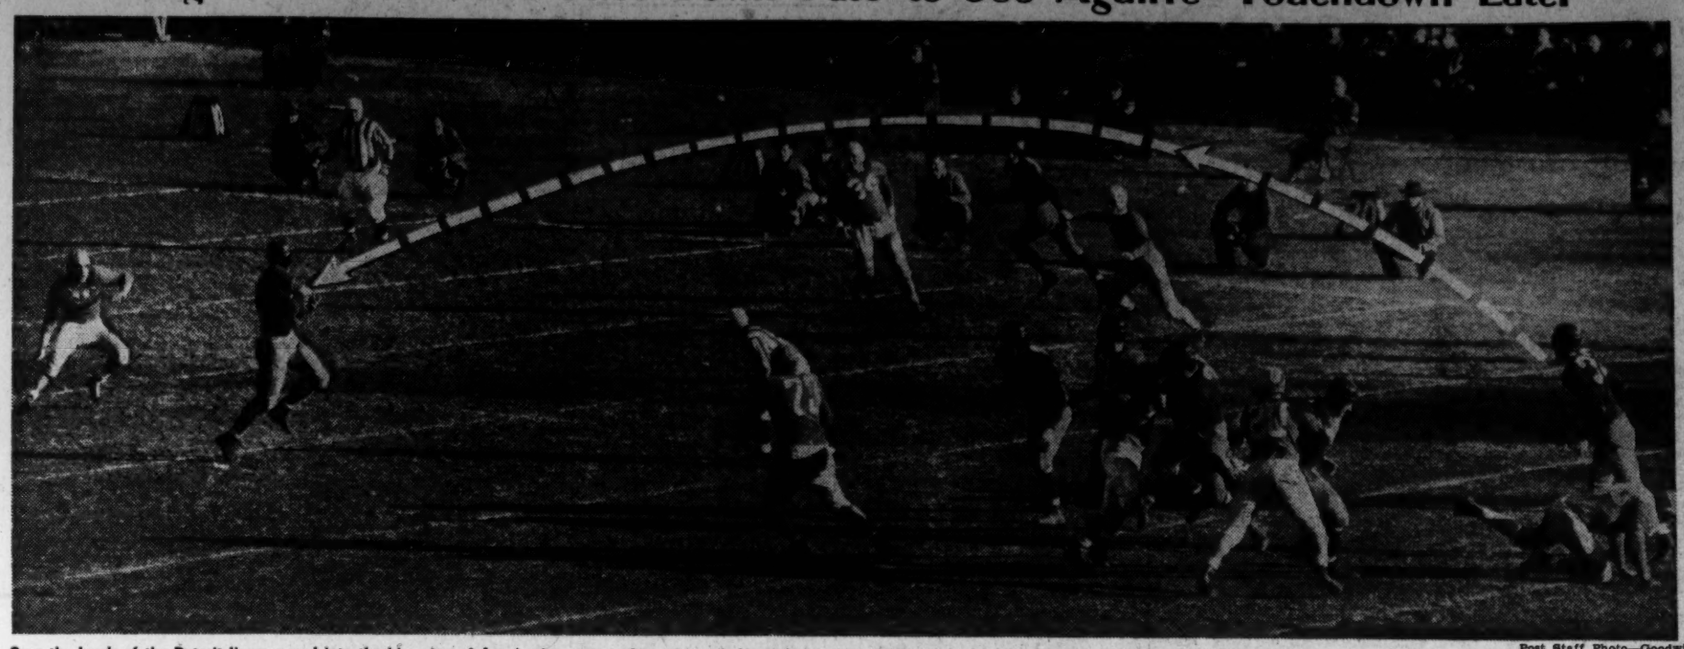
Camp Lee, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—By taking to the air here today the Camp Lee Travelers' very much improved football machine rolled over the Curtis Bay Coast Guard eleven, 33 to 0. The victory avenged a 7-to-6 defeat suffered at the hands of the Coast Guardsmen earlier this season.

With Joe Lalunna, former U. of Richmond backfield ace, doing the most of the chucking, and Big John Flatley handling the majority of catching assignments, the Lee combine had little trouble in rumbling over the visitors.

Don McNeil Scores

Buenos Aires, Nov. 13 (AP).—Lieut. Don McNeil, assistant naval attache at the U. S. Embassy here, advanced to the third round of the Argentina National Tennis Championships today by defeating Renato Achondo, of Chile, 6—8, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2.

Slingin' Sam Floats a First Down Pass to Joe Aguirre—Touchdown Later



Over the heads of the Detroit linemen and into the big mitts of Joe Aguirre goes a Sammy Baugh forward pass in the fourth period for an 11-yard gain. Aguirre was stopped on the Detroit 32-yard line. Sid Luckman Breaks Pass Mark, Bears Win

By Sid Feder

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Sid Luckman put on the greatest air raid in National Football League history today, pitching seven touchdown passes and heaving for a total of 453 yards altogether as he piloted the bone-crushing Chicago Bears to a 56 to 7 triumph over the New York Giants.

One of the largest New York crowds ever to see a pro game—56,591—saw Sid take his airplane ride up and down the Polo Grounds gridiron on his way to his rewriting job on the record books.

His seven scoring aerials for one game wiped out the old mark of six set up by Sammy Baugh of Washington, only two weeks ago and his 453-yard overhead advance smashed the existing previous high of 333 which Cecil Isbell posted for Green Bay on November 1, 1942.

And just by way of icing on the cake, Sid's understudy, Bob Snyder, came in after each touchdown to boot the extra point. He shot a total of eight through the goal posts to shatter the previous record of seven set by Riley Smith of Washington against the Giants five years back.

Altogether, Luckman completed 23 of 30 passes and his seven touchdown heaves gave him 23 for the season, one shy of the season high Isbell put into the books.

And with Sid steering the Bears rolled along the ground and through the air for 702-yards altogether—almost half-a-mile—for still another record, eclipsing the 613-yards the Packers paraded in one game last year.

How Luckman Did It

The Bears scored twice in every period. The only touchdown on which Sid didn't throw came in the second quarter when Harry Clark poured through his own right guard for 4 yards on the scoring end of a 51-yard drive. And Luckman helped set this one up with a 13-yard pitch to Dante Magnani.

Aside from that score, however, Luckman right-handed all the way. In the first quarter, he pitched to Jim Benton for 4 yards and one touchdown and to Connie Berry for 46 and another; in the second chapter, he heaved 26 yards to Hampton Pool for third. Coming back after the intermission, he tossed 38 yards to Clark and 15 to Benton for another pair of six-pointers in the third period, and in the final stanza he flipped 3 yards to George Wilson and 40 to Pool. The scoring marches went varying distances of from 31 to 80 yards.

Holy Cross Tops Stubborn Villanova, 12-7

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 14 (AP).—A breathtaking 69-yard scoring run by Capt. George Titus, recently converted from a center, gave Holy Cross a hard-earned 12-7 victory over a gallant Villanova football team today before a chilled crowd of more than 20,000 at Fitton Field.

The Crusaders opened the scoring in the second period when Titus ended a 49-yard march by sweeping his left end for 10 yards and a touchdown, but were forced to surrender the lead early in the third quarter.

The Wildcats from Pennsylvania's main line strung together 58 of their total yardage of 167 as they ran and passed for the touchdown that Al Postus, their outstanding offensive threat, made with a 3-yard slam. Johnny Siano, a recent Georgetown product, placekicked Villanova into a 7-6 lead.

Mothersheads Win Argyle Club Title In Links Oddity

Mr. and Mrs. Mothershead, Richard and Ruth, have supplanted Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Fritz and Billie, as husband-and-wife club champions at Argyle Country Club in a links oddity without precedent in this section.

Mrs. Mothershead, two-time former champion, defeated Mrs. Williams, defending champion, 2 up, yesterday in the women's final in a well-played match. Mrs. Mothershead was 2 up at the turn and held the lead on the back nine, winning the last hole as the clincher.

Dick Mothershead defeated Jess Baggett for the men's title two weeks ago after Baggett defeated defending champion Fritz Williams in the semifinal. Mrs. Williams was medalist in the women's tournament.

Dodger Pass Score Upsets Steagles, 13-7

Brooklyn, Nov. 14 (AP).—Ken Heineman's toss to Merlyn Condit for a spectacular 65-yard scoring play early in the third period enabled the Brooklyn Dodgers to upset the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh Steagles, 13-7, in a National Football League game played today before 7614 chilled spectators at Ebbets Field.

Pete Cawthorn's flock came from behind to tie it up in the second period and knocked the Steagles out of the Eastern pennant race on a quick stab through the air in the third session.

With the score tied at 7-7 and only four minutes of playing time gone in the third, Heineman faded back and floated a long pass from his own 35 to Condit who picked it out of the air on his finger tips on the Steagles' 30.

The Steagles went out in front midway in the first when they drove 67 yards in nine plays with Bob Thurbon circling own right end to score standing up from the 3 as Johnny Butler cleared Pug Manders out of the way. Gordon Paschka booted the extra point.

Manders, who with Condit carried a good share of the Brooks' burden on offense and defense, scored the first Dodger tally in the second when he bulled over from 6 inches out on last down as the climax of a 53-yard spurt. Bruiser Kinard split the uprights to tie it up.

Heineman's winning pitch to Condit came suddenly after an exchange of kicks. Kinard's placement try was wide but it didn't matter.

Hutson Leads Packers As Cards Bow, 35 to 14

Milwaukee, Nov. 14 (AP).—Don Hutson, Green Bay's brilliant end, turned in another great performance today scoring 23 points as the Packers smothered an impotent Chicago Cardinal eleven, 35 to 14, in a National Football League game before a crowd of 11,000.

Hutson, scoring three touchdowns and kicking five extra points, ran his season's total to 78, putting him far out in front in the league's scoring race as the Packers dominated the play in all but the final quarter.

It was a typical Packer passing show in the early stages as they ran up a comfortable lead and then coasted in. They went 73 yards, mostly through the air, for their first score, traveled 66 yards for their second and 54 for the third marker in the first half.

Cards Narrow Margin

The Cardinals narrowed the margin in the third quarter after blocking a Packer punt but another pass play, good for 86 yards, and a pass interception by Hutson who raced 85 yards for the fifth touchdown put the Packers far out of reach again.

Passes by Irv Comp to Joe Laws, Ted Fritsch and Hutson featured the opening Packer march. The touchdown came on a toss good for 9 yards to Hutson. The Cardinals threatened mildly in the same period, but lost the ball on downs after getting to the Bays' 30.

The second Packer march was similar to first, with the score coming from the 4 when Tony Canadeo tossed to Hutson. Later in the second period Canadeo passed to Hutson again for a 40-yard gain but Don was run out of bounds on the 4. Fritsch carried it over.

In the third period Clint Wager, Cardinal end, blocked a Packer punt on the Packer 21. Line smashes by Bob Morrow covered the remaining distance to the goal and Conway Baker added the point.

Brock, Jacunski Team

Charley Brock and Harry Jacunski worked together for the next Packer score a few minutes later. Brock faded back to his five and passed to Jacunski who caught it on the 40 and raced the rest of the way to a score. The play was good for 86 yards. Hutson's interception of Ronald Cahill's pass on his own 15 and his 85-yard gallop brought the final marker.

The Cardinals came to life in the final period, going from their own 30 to a touchdown on a series of passes by Cahill and runs by Cahill and John Grigas. The touchdown was scored by Runcinski on a pass from the four and Baker added the point.

Golf Star Dies in Plane Crash

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Cherubic Pamela Barton, 26, who won the British and American Women's Golf Championships in 1936 and again in 1939, was killed Saturday in a plane accident in Britain.

The plane crashed in a take-off, and the pilot was hurt seriously.

Miss Barton began playing golf at the age of 12, and entered her first tournament at 14. In 1933 she beat her elder sister, Mervyn, for the girls' golf championship, and reached the final in the women's championship the next year.

She had played for Britain against the United States, and for England against Scotland, Ireland and Wales on numerous occasions. Her father is a London businessman.

Baksi Rebels At Working Here for Bout

Joe Baksi, youthful Wilkes-Barre heavyweight, and Promoter Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club, failed to see eye-to-eye last night regarding Baksi's reporting here tomorrow for training for his scheduled 10-round boxing bout with Herbert Marshall at Uline Arena Friday night.

Ahearn has ordered "Whitey" Bimstein, handler of Baksi, to produce the fighter for public workouts here tomorrow. Baksi just as stubbornly insists that he will complete training at Stillman's gymnasium, New York.

Ahearn and Baksi were deadlocked last night as Goldie still insisted the fighter turn up tomorrow, while Baksi said he would hold off reporting here until Thursday because he says he cannot get the kind of sparring partners he needs in Washington. Ahearn claims he has plenty available.

Tosses Four Passes for Touchdowns

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Another of Sammy Baugh's untouchable one-man shows, a truly great individual performance in which the torrid Texan smashed two more National Football League records, carried the Redskins to a 42-20 triumph over the Detroit Lions yesterday in Griffith Stadium before 35,540 fans, including those who paid out $5 for bleacher seats.

At his passing best with 18 completions in 30 attempts, including four for touchdowns; great as a kicker, specializing in quick kicks with one rolling up 81 yards, Baugh simply outdid himself in the pass interception department as his four for the game and total of 10 for the season both accounted for league marks.

Baugh's great day moved the Redskins three full games in front in the Eastern Division race and they are the closest to a sure thing in football history to successfully defend their divisional crown. Baugh had scoring help from Lou Rymkus, who loped 12 yards with an intercepted pass, and Andy Farkas, who moved 36 on a spinner, but for the day it was Baugh, Baugh, Baugh. Sammy played all but a minute and 35 seconds of the game.

Scored Against Reserves

The Redskins scored in the first period against the Lion reserves, twice in the second and added a fourth touchdown in the third period for a 28-0 lead before the Lions got rambunctious and scored three times in 10 minutes to move the count to 28-21 with 10 minutes to play. It was the Redskins who packed a pair of six-pointers in the late going, however, to the delight of the city's third capacity pro crowd of the year.

A standout for the losing Lions was the two-time unanimous All-American choice from Georgia, Frankie Sinkwich, who despite playing in hard luck and with a minimum of help and protection came up with an excellent performance.

Sinkwich the passer connected for two touchdown aerials, one of 22 yards to Jack Mathewson and another of 40 to Bill Callihan. Sinkwich the pass-interceptor raced 39 yards to another score, Sinkwich of the punt-returning Sinkwich's reversed his field in a brilliant dash of 77 yards, Sinkwich the ball-carrier averaged better than 4 yards a try and Sinkwich the kicker booted three for better than 50 yards each.

Rushed off his feet by the charging Redskin forward wall, Sink-

Game Slated To Decide Coast Title

San Francisco, Nov. 14 (AP).—The University of Washington and the University of Southern California will be the rival football teams in the annual Rose Bowl contest at Pasadena New Year's day, a special committee of the Pacific Coast Conference decided today.

This game will also decide the Pacific Coast Conference championship.

The committee after its meeting, a closed session, said in a statement:

"The Tournament of Rose Association and the Pacific Coast Conference explored in full the possibility of playing a game of traditional East-West character, but from all points of view, including the military, the Washington-Southern California contest was chosen as the most desirable and practicable under present war conditions.

"Because of a vacation period covering the holiday season Washington is able to play at Pasadena on January 1."

Comparative scores certainly do things to the Rose Bowl game that pits the University of Southern California against the Washington Huskies.

Washington smashed the Fourth Air Force team in Seattle, 27 to 7, and the Fliers trampled on the Trojans, 35 to 0. That makes Washington 55 points better than Southern California, on paper.

Ralph (Pest) Welch, once at Purdue and now coach of the Huskies, saw the Air Force team pass the Trojans dizzy here in the Coliseum. He's sold on his team. Says he has a great line and boys who don't have to have replacements. They're a bunch of iron men. He says he has two backs, Sam Robinson and Pete Susick, who are ready for pro ball.

"But don't be misled by comparative scores," Welch put in. "We were all fired up for the March Field team and they were just playing another game. I think they're a betting team and they didn't get much down in Seattle. The Trojans seem to have been hard hit by the loss of some of their key men and it is apparent that inexperience in the backfield caused Saturday's rout."

St. Mary's Tars Defeat Dons, 41 to 0

San Francisco, Nov. 14 (AP).—The St. Mary's Navy Preflight School Air Devils ran over the University of San Francisco football team today, 41-0, before 5000 fans.

The big service squad smashed to three touchdowns in the first period and scored again in each succeeding quarter.

Whistle Beats the Fumble

Sammy Baugh is reaching for the ball, while to Farkas' right, Lion Augie Lio and Lion Frankie Sinkwich come up on the play. No. 17 for the Redskins is Dick Farman and Frank Seno is 25. Redskins won, 42-20.

wich connected for 6 of 15 passes for 90 yards but 3 of his heaves were intercepted by Baugh.

Frankie finally left the game after being smothered on an attempted kickoff return in the fourth period but the Redskins were convinced his clippings were not exaggerated.

Moore Tossed Out

The Redskins won easily despite the absence of Baugh's favorite pass receiver and the great defensive back, Wilbur Moore, who to the astonishment of his teammates was banished from the game for unnecessary roughness in the first period. The usually placid Moore came up punching after he was thrown out of bounds by Ben Hightower and the officials ordered him out and the 'Skins penalized 15 yards. Unnoticed by the officials, however, according to Moore's Redskin teammates, was Hightower's roughing of Moore when he smothered "Gabby's" nose in the lime and added a punch.

Baugh fortunately held a hot hand without Moore and shot his touchdown aerials to Bob Masterson, twice, Joe Aguirre and Bob Seymour.

Baugh's passing through the first three periods was a case of necessity as the Redskins had a horrible time trying to pick up yardage on the ground. Until Andy Farkas broke loose midway in the fourth period on his touchdown dash, his college coach, Gus Dorais, had him completely stopped on the ground.

Time and again Baugh sent Farkas on smashes or reverses into the Redskin line but each time Andy would bounce back and for his second attempt when a bad pass from center forced him to rush the kick.

Quick Kicks Aplenty

Baugh resorted to effective but sometimes monotonous quick kicking through the first half of the initial period, booming three in a row on first down for 54, 46 and 66 yards. Chuck Fenenbock and Harry Hopp matched the first two but the third shoved the Lions in a hole on their 8-yard line and after Hopp kicked feebly out Baugh pitched a score.

Sinkwich and the Lion first stringers took over in the second period but Sinkwich, running wide on all passing attempts, had little time for dead aim and four times in a single period his passes found Redskin hands. Baugh returned one 20 yards, snatched another as he ran out of bounds and a third was wrested from Hightower's grasp on the goal line. Meanwhile, with Sinkwich passing deep in his own territory, Rymkus broke up an intended screen pass play by intercepting before the pigskin reached the screen and he was untouched in a 12-yard goal-line gallop.

The 'Skins were magnificent in marching to a score without relinquishing the ball at the outset of the second half. Baugh led them 73 yards in six plays, five of them passes, plus a 27-yard gain on interference.

Sinkwich Runs Long One

Sinkwich, at his best with a little start, took the Lions into Redskin territory for the second time in the game in the third period. He settled under a Baugh punt on his own 2, raced up the north sideline until Redskins closed in and then cut across the field with a change of pace and behind Callihan's blocking raced up the opposite side. Farkas played Callihan and Sinkwich to perfection, however, and as Clyde Shugart and Seymour caught up with help Farkas cut quickly to force Sinkwich out of bounds after a 77-yard gallop. Redskin George Smith nailed Harry Hopp with such force on the next play Hopp fumbled and Baugh recovered.

Sinkwich's first touchdown pass was a nice piece of work on Frankie's part and Matheson, who slipped into the coffin corner for the catch from 22 yards out. His second, to Callihan, however, was helped by George Smith who tipped the ball into Callihan's hands as he went up in a futile attempt to bat it down. Callihan played a good all-round game for the Lions. The Lions moved 80 yards to the second score, Hopp crossing the 'Skins by passing 40 yards from the end zone to Mathews.

Baugh was passing with a new faking motion, swinging his trusty right arm in windmill fashion as he searched for a receiver and faking shovel passes and quick kicks.

Rymkus played another outstanding game on the Redskin line, along with Dick Farman and Smith. Lio the Lion was the Redskins' biggest nemesis in the Detroit forward wall.

Baugh averaged 52 yards for the day on his kicking despite one which the Lions partially blocked and recovered after it traveled only 15 yards. Sammy's 81-yard masterpiece was only five yards short of the record, a beautiful, quick kick punt which took perfect forward bounces and barely rolled into the end zone for a touchback. The ball almost bounded on the one-yard line.

Hunters Clog Roads, Defy OPA Check

Detroit, Nov. 14 (AP).—A five-mile-long string of automobiles carrying hunters to Michigan's upper peninsula for the opening of the deer season Monday was jammed at the approach to Mackinac Straits docks yesterday while three State ferries operated on a 24-hour schedule in an effort to reduce the jam.

The mass migration of hunters apparently was one of the largest in recent years despite current gasoline restrictions and announcement by the regional Office of Price Administration that agents would check traffic for rationing violations.

Ferry dock employes estimated that 2500 vehicles were transported across the straits in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a. m. today. No comparison with previous years was available.

Michigan hunters had sought approval from OPA for gas-pooling in the hunting season but the request was denied.

Feathered Bear Scout Wings Over Field in 'Skin-Bear Game

Whether it was a Chicago Bear scout in disguise or just a lonely feathered friend, Peter (or Patricia) Pigeon added a comic touch to the Redskin-Detroit game yesterday in Griffith Stadium.

With its powder blue feathers blending with the color of the Lions' uniforms, the lonely pigeon spent the entire afternoon within the 40-yard lines, fluttering, skipping and flying out of the way of the 200-odd-pound bruisers.

Center George Smith of the Redskins paid particular attention to Friend Pigeon, attempting to shoo it off the field time and again, but the pigeon liked it out there, which is more than the Lions could say. Frankie Sinkwich had to duck on one occasion or somebody might have been hurt—probably the pigeon.

The pigeon played no favorites. When the teams retired to the dressing room at half time, the pigeon withstood the noisy Redskin band in formation in midfield. Finally, after the Redskins ran up a comfortable lead the stool pigeon took off, probably in flight to the Polo Grounds in New York, to report to Chicago Bear Coach Hunk Anderson.

Lou Rymkus, who has scored two touchdowns in the last two games, one on a blocked kick and yesterday on an intercepted pass, scored only one other touchdown in his career. While a sophomore in high school he fell on a ball in the end zone after a teammate blocked a Bill DeCorrevont kick. Through four years at Notre Dame he was scoreless. . . . Joe Pasqua suffered a slight concussion when knocked out of bounds in the third period, while Ray Hare required a stitch over his left eye from a cleat mark. . . . Sammy Baugh's league records remain at eight, as while he took over the game and season pass interception records he lost the touchdown-passes-in-one-game and total yards to Sid Luckman's great day in New York.

Steve Slivinski, with an assortment of minor injuries, sat the entire game out while Willie Wilkin left early after taking an unintentional kick on his bad knee. . . . Sammy Baugh, with 19 touchdown passes in six games, has passed his best previous 11-game touchdown pass total of 16. . . . The Redskins have now beaten the Lions five straight times, running up their highest point total yesterday. . . . The biggest single improvement in the play of a Redskin was by Joe Aguirre in the kickoff department. Four times his soaring boots carried into the end zone while only one went out of bounds. Augie Lion was no slough for the lions.

Washington Lions Defeat Pickett

Camp Pickett, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—The Camp Pickett Warriors, weakened by loss of several key players, found the Washington Lions, a professional gridiron team from the Nation's Capital, too strong and bowed, 19 to 0 before several thousand fans here today.

The visiting professionals, sparked by backs Banks, Perry, and Wells, and a line that made the holes demonstrated superior power from the opening whistle. Pickett couldn't score and managed to threaten the Lion's goal only once during the game.

Two Capactiy Audiences Greet Ballet Theater Performers

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Symphony Orchestra collaborates with the Ballet Theater on Sunday afternoon and evening in Constitution Hall. Matinee program: Swan Lake (Chaikovski), Peter and the Wolf (Prokofiev), The Fair at Sorochinsk (Musorgski). Evening program: Princess Aurora (Chaikovski), Lilac Garden (Chausson), Helen of Troy (Offenbach). Conductors: Antal Dorati and Mois Zlatin.

Sold-out houses greeted the Ballet Theater in Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon and evening when the National Symphony Orchestra occupied the pit instead of the stage in its usual concert auditorium. In the record of the orchestra, the two performances stand as special concerts, and it is fitting that they should, for one does not always hear music so fully instrumented and so excellently played as the rhythmic foundation of dancing. Antal Dorati carried the chief responsibility as conductor, while Mois Zlatin wielded the baton for one ballet.

At the matinee performance, the last act of Chaikovski's "Swan Lake," which is all that one ordinarily sees of that three-act ballet, had first place on the program as a demonstration of the traditional Russian ballet in classic styie. The principal roles were taken by Nora Kaye as the Queen of the Swans, Dmitri Romanov as Prince Siegfried, John Kriza as Benne and John Taras as the Sorcerer. Miss Kaye, who succeeded to the part Alicia Markova has been dancing this season, gave a performance notable for skill and grace. The dancing of the ensemble was not up to the company's previous tandard in synchronization or in technical details.

Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf" needs some alterations in Adolph Bolm's choreography and in treatment of characters to make it more nearly conform to the composer's idea. One does not like to think that he imagined Peter to be anything but a normal, average boy instead of a grimacing and clowning urchin. Still the music lends itself well to visualization, and the ballet is amusing throughout. Ferando Alonso danced and mimed the Peter, but the hit of the entertainment was Virginia Wilcox as the Cat.

The first novelty of the engagement, "The Fair at Sorochinsk," using music from Musorgski's opera of that name, and "A Night on Bald Mountain," is the work of David Lichin, one of the most gifted of our younger choregraphers. Still the balllet needs revision for the sake of greater clarity in the action. The story of Ukrainian folklore and superstition is difficult to follow, and the broom dance of the witches is confused in its patterns. Lucia Chase as Khivria is given too little dancing to do and too much gesticulation of a vague kind. Anton Dolin as Red Coat, the Ukrainian equivalent of the devil, was a dynamo of energy and the dominating figure in personality.

The night bill opened with "Princess Aurora," the last act from Chaikovski's "The Sleeping Beauty," and afforded Nora Kaye another opportunity to exercise her increasing talent as a ballerina. Her partner was Anton Dolin, this time completely in the classical mode and effective in technique. The "Bluebird" pas deux was excellently done by Rosella Hightower and Andre Eglevski.

"Lilac Garden," accompanied by Chausson's "Poeme" again wrought its charm upon those who have seen it before. It is a beautiful piece of choreography by Anton Dolin, so finely thought out and so atmospheric, so delicate in detail and so imaginative in conception that it belongs in the same category with Martha Graham's "Letter to the World." The principal roles were subtly and suavely danced by Nora Kaye, Maria Karnilova, Hugh Laing and Antony Tudor. Millard Taylor took a bow, and justly, for his playing of the solo violin.

David Lichin scored another success with his adaptation of Offenbach's "La Belle Helene" into an uproarious travesty. "Helen of Troy" is a compound of fast and furious fun with choreography that requires no textbook to follow, provided that one knows anything about the antecedents of the Trojon War. Jerome Robbins as the sly and offhandedly humorous Hermes drew one's eyes continually, even away from the moments of real ballet dancing by Maria Karnilova as Helen and Andre Eglevski as Paris. A minor role that was cleverly carired out was that of Patricia Barker as the Lamb.

Piano Recitals

A full house greeted Felicia Rybier, resident pianist, when she presented a recital yesterday afternoon in the improvised concert hall of the Phillips Memorial Gallery. There is perhaps no recital spot in the city more conducive to the enjoyment of music than the Phillips Gallery—particularly as it was yesterday with Repentant Peter back in his place.

Miss Rybier chose for her program Handel's Harmonious Blacksmith, Daquin's Le Coucou, Scarlatti's Pastorale et Capriccio, three Chopin compositions, Ballade in A flat, Nocturne Opus 9 No. 3 and the B minor Scherzo, Rakmaninov's Elegie, Glinka-Balakirev's The Lark, a Faure Impromptu, Mana-Zucca's Cuban Dance, Turina's Miniaturas and Leyenda by Albeniz. Lecuona's Malaguena was played as an encore.

Corpl. Gyorgy Sandor of the United States Army, played a program of piano music yesterday afternoon in the National Gallery of Arts' East Garden Court, for a most enthusiastic and responsive audience.

There are some faults in his playing. His rhythms sometimes lack incisiveness.

A. C. Clements, Ex-Arlington Sheriff, Dies

Andrew Cornelius Clements, 64, sheriff of Arlington County from 1920 to 1924, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital, where he had been a patient for a week. His son, Pvt. Joseph E. Clements, who is on leave from Camp Lee, said he had been ill about two months.

A veteran of the Spanish-American War, Mr. Clements saw action as a member of the District of Columbia Volunteers in 1898, and served in the regular Army in the Philippine Islands from 1900 to 1903. He was with the famous Third Cavalry at Vigan, in the hills of Luzon Island, and was one of the first Americans to enter that region.

Mr. Clements retired on November 1 of this year after working 25 years at the Navy Yard. He was born in Georgetown and lived in Arlington for 40 years. His parents were Joseph Clements and Lavina Oliver Clements, formerly of Fairfax County, Va., before moving to Georgetown.

In 1905 in Arlington, Mr. Clements married the former Eula Virginia Plaugher of Strasburg, Va. They have been making their home at 1237 Bluemont Drive in recent years. Mr. Clements was a member of the First Baptist Church of Arlington.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, Private Clements, of Camp Lee, Corpl. Andrew Cornelius Clements, jr., who is in the Mediterranean area, and William Perry Clements, a student at Claude Swanson High School in Arlington; a daughter, Mrs. Elva Lee Sieber of Arlington, wife of Corpl. Andrew Sieber who is stationed in New Haven, Conn., and two grandchildren, Joan and John Sieber.

Also surviving are two sisters and a brother: Mrs. Joseph Matheson of Washington, Mrs. Mary Taylor of Lyon Park, Arlington, and Clarence Clements of Washington.

Common Bonds Of Philippines, U. S. Recalled

America and the Philippines have common political and spiritual bonds, the Rev. Francis X. Talbot, editor of America, said yesterday at a mass commemorating the eighth anniversary of the Philippine Commonwealth's establishment.

Father Talbot, speaking at St. Patrick's Catholic Church, 10th and G sts. nw., expressed hope that Americans and Filipinos could return to the Philippines by 1946 to pray at the graves of "those who died so valiantly in the islands' defense."

President Manuel L. Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth was absent from the service because of illness, but was represented by Vice President Sergio Osmena.

Also worshiping at the mass were Mrs. Manuel Quezon and daughters, Maria Aurora and Maria Zeneida, and a son, Manuel jr.; Col. Carlos Romulo, secretary of the Commonwealth's Department of Information, and Col. Manuel Nieto, aide de camp to President Quezon.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore and Washington, celebrated the mass.

Roosevelt Commends U. S. Home Builders

President Roosevelt yesterday commended the Nation's builders for the contribution they have made to the war housing program, and urged them "to go forward with all their energies to complete the job."

His statements were contained in a message to Frank W. Cortright, vice president of the National Association of Home Builders, to be read at the organization's Home Builders' War Conference, at Cleveland. The President said:

"Your war conference can look back with a great deal of satisfaction on the work that has been accomplished and all any one could ask is that its members go forward with all their energies to complete the job.

"I am thoroughly aware of the problems which have faced you. Traditionally your members have been free to build for those who wanted homes; suddenly you were forced to operate under restrictions which must have been burdensome in the extreme.

"I take pleasure in recalling to you that your Government recognized the problems confronting the building industry; and that it cooperated with you in mapping out a program in which your great resources could be used to play a vitally important part in the war program.

"I think that National Housing Administrator John B. Blandford, jr., is proudest of the fact that Government and private industry have worked as a team in the whole war housing effort. I am equally confident with him that this teamwork will continue until that program is completed and will then be utilized to tackle the great job ahead when victory is won.

"Housing will be one of the most important parts of this Nation's postwar program as everyone knows. Upon you will devolve a great responsibility and I am sure you will meet it."

W. K. Nottingham

William Kybard Nottingham, 65, a native of Washington and a resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, died at his home there yesterday.

He was educated in the public schools here and for years was auditor for The Washington Post. He left in 1918 to go with the Cincinnati Enquirer as business manager. He remained with the Ohio paper until his death.

Surviving are the wife, Mrs. Rose Brett Nottingham, and a daughter, Mrs. Leslie Meek, jr., both of Cincinnati, and a sister, Mrs. Walter A. Gill of Long Island.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Hines funeral home, 14th and Clifton sts. nw., at 3 p. m. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery. The Temple-Noyes Masonic lodge also will conduct services.

FUNNY-LOOKING gadget, that old-time radio set. Big, bulky horn . . . dials and more dials . . . squeaky and noisy as all get out. Not much like the radio now in your living-room or car. And yet the radio you buy not too long after the war may make your present-day set look and sound as antiquated as that early Electronic instrument looks now. Today Electronics is fighting for America and its Allies brilliantly and successfully. In battle it warns of approaching danger so we can destroy the enemy; in the electric eye it searches for and exposes flaws in heavy castings; in resistance-welding it doubles and triples production. These and countless others are Electronic achievements of vast importance now and for the future. The First Electronic instrument to benefit will be radio.

ARMY E NAVY

For the continued development and production of Radio Communications and other special Electronic equipment for our Armed Forces, the Motorola organization has been awarded two stars for their Army-Navy "E" Flag. Motorola is proud of the part it has been privileged to play in the speeding of Victory.

Your First Post-War Electronic Purchase Should Be a Motorola Radio

Motorola Engineers are making full use of the newest Electronic knowledge in the production and development of Radar and Communications Equipment now being used by American fighting men on every battle front. Soon after Victory gives the green light to civilian production, the "know-how" of Motorola Engineers will be switched to the production of civilian radios for home and car with the same all-out efficiency and perfection. Expect the finest in Radio from Motorola.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

New Pay Raise Bill To Be Offered Soon

A new Federal employe pay raise bill is scheduled to be introduced this week in the Senate . . . Reports at Lend-Lease have two of the top officials planning an early retirement from Government work. They are Bernhard Knollenberg and Arthur B. Van Buskirk and they have been running the agency since Edward Stettinius was appointed Undersecretary of State and both are on the staff of Leo Crowley, FEA boss . . . Postoffice inspectors seems to get a peculiar delight in threatening and scaring headquarters employes. The employes are suggesting that they go out and catch criminals and leave them alone for a change . . . United Federal Workers of America has retained Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, to file suit to enjoin the Civil Service Commission from enforcing the Hatch Act which prevents Federal employes from actively participating in politics. The UFWA believes the act makes Federal workers second-class citizens.

KLUTTZ

Senator Vandenberg the other day glanced at his hometown newspaper and his eyes became fixed on this hedaline: "Vandenberg Makes Tremendous Gains." That's wonderful, he said to himself, but as he read further he deflated himself. The headline referred to a high school athlete by the name of Bob Vandenberg (no kin) who had made tremendous gains on a football field . . . Among the newcomers at OPA is a bigshot businessman with an Irish name and a quick temper. People who don't agree with him are sneeringly called professors and most of the people he has called professors are businessmen like himself. He won't last long . . . Despite all the rumors to the contrary, insiders now say the Rockefeller agency will be continued as is and Nelson Rockefeller won't be appointed Assistant State Secretary as had been planned.

Father Draft Again

OPA officials are thoroughly alarmed over the effect of the father draft on its office here. The organization is made up of comparatively young men and of its 1400 males here, more than 1000 are within draft-age, most of them fathers . . . Georgia Hall, the last of the dormitories at Arlington Farms, is now open and it's being filled mainly by new Government girls who will work for either Army or Navy. Both agencies are in the midst of recruiting programs and between them they're bringing 150 girls here every week. Incidentally, Army is now paying transportation fare here for new appointees . . . The Ramspeck Civil Service investigating committee is looking into charges that private employment agencies here are charging fees to get people Government jobs.

Marie Dorsey, 22-year-old clerk at Army Air Forces, was taken sick soon after she had reported for work on Friday, November 5. When she didn't respond to treatment at the Pentagon emergency room, her friends sought to get her into a hospital but they couldn't locate a vacant room. That evening a War Department ambulance took Marie to her room, a room, her friends say, that was cold and unheated. Marie was finally taken to a hospital Saturday noon and she died a few hours later from a hemorrhage.

Perhaps it would have made no difference if the girl had been placed in a hospital the moment she became ill. No one knows. Marie was given medical attention. But her case does point up the weakness of the Government in providing for cases of this kind; in fact, of most cases where employes—especially single girls—are taken sick. Indeed, Marie was fortunate that Pentagon has a well equipped emergency room.

Indefensible Action

And her case brings to attention another indefensible action by the Government. Marie's family is of modest circumstances and friends here arranged for the body to be shipped to their Bath, N. Y., home. Employes in her office took up a collection and sent a purse to the family. This collection in Government offices is a regular procedure when anyone of modest means dies. You see, the pay of a Federal worker stops the moment he dies. He doesn't get paid for the annual leave he earns and is entitled to. If the Government paid for the accumulated annual leave—it does if the employe resigns—it would put a stop to the practice of making Federal employes pay to help bury some of their own dead.

Navy Department is planning to issue pins to its civilian employes who have distinguished themselves. . . . War Department is planning a big day on December 8, the second anniversary of our war with the Axis, by giving an estimated 31,000 civilians here service ribbons. Employes who have been with the department more than six months will get the awards . . . If you want to quit your job you'll find it harder, much harder, to get released. Agencies are really cracking down and they won't release anyone unless it can be proved that it will cause them undue personal hardship to remain . . . The Ramspeck Committee is making a check of all Federal jobs that require a college education to fill. The new chief investigator of the committee will be named this week. He'll be a man with Government experience.

Just for Heck of It, Troupe of Dancers Here Stages an Impromptu Ballet on Life in D. C.

ON THEIR TOES IN THE "WASHINGTON WHIRLPOOL"—There really isn't any ballet like that, but the dancers at Constitution Hall took time out yesterday afternoon to show how they'd do it if there were. Interpreted in ballet shoes are: (Upper left) A speech-making Congressman shakes his fist and kicks his heels for the benefit of back-home visitors. Dimitri Romanoff executes the entre chat, but not for the Congressional Record. (Center) A couple of Washington whirlers are these refugees from the Pentagon Building, Doreen Oswald and Patricia Barker. (Upper right) Life in a Washington street car is a chummy proposition: Lurching in unison from imaginary carstraps are Patricia Barker, Nora Kaye, Doreen Oswald, Shirley Eckl and Margaret Banks. (Lower left) Nora Kaye's well-trained legs should enable her to snag her man, but, as any Government girl could tell her, there's a definite manpower shortage. (Lower right). When it comes to the end of a busy day, Alicia Alonso quietly passes out, though more gracefully than the usual run of Washingtonians . . . All in all, they made it purty, too.

By Helene Champlain

With the slightly dizzy spirit of wartime Washington as their inspiration, Ballet Theatre artists yesterday produced a strictly off-the-record ballet, exclusively for Post readers.

Backstage at Constitution Hall, as they changed "Swan Lake" costumes for "Peter and the Wolf" garb, half a dozen Washington-minded dancers took what's known as a busman's holiday. They staged a few impromptu scenes straight out of the Capital's whirl and familiar to anyone who's ever walked down Pennsylvania ave.

Incidentally, even the cast was in the traditional Washington groove of six-girls-to-a-man.

For those who can't enjoy the dance to the fullest without benefit of program notes, herewith is the story of the first ballet of Washington:

WASHINGTON WHIRLPOOL

Music by the National Symphony Orchestra.

This ballet is inspired by innumerable tales of life as it is lived in Washington. It follows closely the legend of the small-town farmer's daughter who secures a Civil Service job and finds herself caught in the maelstrom of the Washington scene today. One of the few ballets based upon contemporary life, it is staged for the first time for The Post.

Newly arrived in the city, a Government girl becomes a part of the crowd—huddled on a streetcar, waiting for a restaurant table jammed in a two-by-four room with four others like her. Troubled by empty evenings, she strikes out in search of the elusive male, already sought after by a dozen girls who arrived in Washington first.

But the only ones she finds are in Congress, too busy talking to themselves to talk to her. She becomes one of those famed Pentagon Building workers and, really dizzy with the whirl of it all, she collapses—after a brief search for an available foot of space in which to collapse.

Nongivers Asked to Call Fund Office

"Stand-by squads," organized over the weekend as an emergency measure to put over the Community War Fund $4,800,000 drive by Friday, will go into action today, awaiting calls at fund headquarters from those who have not yet contributed.

"Every single person in Washington who has been missed by a Community War Fund solicitor will have his chance to contribute after noon today," said E. K. Morris, chairman of the Metropolitan Division, as the fund stood $572,000 short and only 88.008 per cent subscribed.

Immediate Service

Metropolitan workers will be sent immediately to those who have not been solicited and call Metropolitan 2284 for the service. Solicitors will report at whatever time is requested.

Morris emphasized: "We don't want a single person in this city to be missed in this campaign which represents such a great cause. Washington can't afford to let this campaign fail. Every eye in this country is watching this city's contribution.

"Call us for yours . . . We'll come and get it," he concluded.

Meanwhile, "thank you" notes from all over the world are coming to fund headquarters from men who have benefited from the United Seamen's Service, one of the 145 agencies which Washington residents' contributions support.

From Far-Off Iraq

Acknowledging receipt of shipments of supplies, paid for by fund-given dollars, Karl Kellogg, United Seamen's regional director in Iraq, wrote:

"We have everything that is needed to make this spot one of the outstanding places in the world. The men have been driving me nuts to get the place open. The USS center is the only place seamen can go. Everything else is out of bounds. The building is well designed for such operation as we intend to put it to."

A seaman's testimony to fund-supported services read:

"I have just come back from a two-week stay at Bay Ridge and want you to know how impressed I am by the fine rest center there. It is difficult for me to put into a letter my true feelings about the USS in Baltimore and the rest center at Bay Ridge. I have found the personnel at both places extremely friendly and helpful. They have done everything in their power to make me comfortable and happy and I am anxious to bring this to the attention of the persons who head this fine organization."

3 Held as Grid Ticket Scalper Trade Booms

By Joseph Paull

Three persons were charged with selling tickets on public places, as scalpers sold tabs at blackmarket prices did a booming business yesterday at the Griffith Stadium Redskins-Lions football game, police said last night.

Prices of $10 for a box seat were obtained and 68 scalpers were counted by this reporter.

Police and Internal Revenue agents regularly visited one establishment where tickets were sold but said they found no violation. On the street and all around the ball park, however, the law was violated.

Those arrested were:

Olando Alston, 23, Negro, of 1626 Ninth st. nw., who posted $300 collateral.

Leonard C. Jackson, 29, Negro, of 900 44th st. ne., who posted $25 which police said he elected to forfeit.

Sam Rappaport, 41, of 4236 Wisconsin ave. nw., who last night was being held in lieu of bond at Police Precinct No. 13.

The game was announced early in the week as a sellout. Tickets could be—and were—obtained yesterday from scalpers until after 3 o'clock. The game began at 2 p. m. There were indications that much of the selling was done on a large scale by organized groups.

Sid Carroll, general manager of the Redskins, said every effort had been made to keep tickets out of the hands of the "wrong people." He said: "We don't like scalping any more than you do. The only large sales we made were to Army, Navy and Capitol groups. Apparently the scalpers come in and get tickets in small numbers. We can't stop that."

Some Sales Were Legal

In at least one establishment, legal jacking-up of prices was prevalent. Police were powerless to do anything about thes sales, but the sidewalk salesmen also were generally unhindered by police. Sales were observed within 15 feet of places where police were stationed, and the ticket hawkers outside the bleacher section shouted out their prices and dickered with customers openly.

In a printing establishment at 2004 Georgia ave. nw., two men accommodated a line of patrons from noon until 2:45, when they closed the door. The prices here were up to $6 for a $3.30 ticket, and $5 for a $2.20 ticket. These tickets were sold legally.

A barker outside the ball park directed the traffic of ticketseekers to the agency by shouting, "No tickets inside the park. All you want across the street."

Apparently the Treasury stood to profit by the transactions in this establishment, because one tax of 10 per cent was paid at the Redskins box-office and another 10 per cent on the mark-up price paid at the sales agency.

This reporter paid $5 for a $2.20 ticket for a grandstand seat unfavorably located. Apparently hundreds of fans were forced to pay such prices to see the game.

There are two regulations against scalpers in Washington. One, a police regulation, prohibits sales on public spaces. The second, a revenue statute prohibts sales of tickets on which the sales price is not marked or the tax not paid. For this violation there is a $100 fine.

But illegal sales were prevalent all around the stadium. This reporter was approached more than 20 times within 10 minutes with offers of bleacher tickets. The regular price for these tickets is $1.10, but the demanded price was from $2 to $5.

One scalper had a 2-inch stack of bleacher tickets which he sold before game time.

Sales Made at Two Per Minute

Another sold two grandstand tickets a minute. He made no approaches, leaving that to the many willing customers.

At the print shop, where tickets were stamped with the name, A. B. Vincent, sales were recorded on several sheets. On the top sheet, more than 50 sales were written, with more than $200 handed over the counter.

When police left the print shop, one of the salesmen laughed and said, "We'll raise the price to $8 now. The law has left."

Several children, mostly Negroes, were selling tickets outside the park. A well-dressed Negro youth approached several boys and they turned over sums of money to him. The money in turn was handed to a white man. In this one transaction he was given at least $55. The white man then rushed into the pall park.

5 Lie Dead

Traffic Victim Still Fighting For Her Life

District Fire Chief Stephen Porter last night advocated "strict hearing tests before driver's licenses are issued" instead of the ordinary "conversational tests" now used, as the aftermath of the weekend cluster of five traffic deaths and injuries to more than a dozen at a late hour threatened to add another to the list of those dead.

MISS SCOTT

In Emergency Hospital fighting for her life was Marjorie Jacob of 225 Maple ave., Takoma Park, Md., while the families of five others prepared final rites for those killed. Miss Jacob was riding in a car that collided with a fire truck and overturned.

Sergt. Wilburt Carmalt, riding on the apparatus, was in the same hospital in a somewhat less critical condition and Miss Nell Lord of 3421 14th st. nw.

COOMBE

and Leonard Smith, of 2306 F st. nw., occupants of the car, with the Jacob girl, also were under treatment as "serious."

Chief Porter admitted the problem of preventing future wholesale accidents was a perplexing one. He first advocated strict hearing tests and secondly, urged drivers not to keep car windows closed and their car radios on. He said such practice made hearing of approaching vehicles difficult.

Those killed were:

Alfred Headley, 21, 1301 Savannah st. se.; Charles H. Callaway, 63, 17 Sherman ave., Tacoma Park, Md.; Arthur R. Robinson, 27, 6746 Eastern ave. nw.; Maj. John A. Johnson, 40, war veteran and second in command of the Maryland State Guard, Colmar Manor, Md., and Miss Velma Walsh, 20, 3421 14th st. nw.

HEADLEY

Other traffic victims include Miss Lillian Bennbedtto, 53, of 1813 Otis, pl. ne.; Mrs. Thelma Ellis White, 34, of 4805 South Dakota ave. ne., and Ann Williams, Negro, 22, of 1731 9th st. nw., who was kept in Gallinger Hospital in an undetermined condition. Miss Bennbedtto was hurt in a collision between a truck and a sedan at Montana and New York aves. ne. at 3:55 a. m. No charges were placed against either of the drivers.

ROBINSON

Leonard Smith, one of the victims in serious condition, was disclosed by his mother, Mrs. Jesse C. Smith, to have undergone 14 operations as a child and to have been saved by a dozen blood transfusions after a serious pneumonia attack. His mother said that "once again she had to thank God" because her son had been spared.

CALAWAY

The condition of the fire truck's driver, Pvt. Francis Marcey of Arlington, Va., remained undetermined. Also undetermined was the condition of Douglas C. Coombe, 4826 7th st. nw., who drove a car which crashed into a tree.

CARMALT

Two victims of an accident which cost the life of Headley, 1301 Savannah st. se., Saturday, were in "good" condition yesterday. They are Mrs. Peggy L. Scott of 116 N. St. Asaph st., Alexandria, Va., and Miss Clara Klason of 2721 S. Meade st., Arlington, Va.

Owners Deny Navy Will Take The Chastleton

Fears of tenants of the Chastleton Hotel, 16th and R sts. nw., that they will be evicted to make room for WAVES are not warranted, Thomas D. Carson, president of Washington Properties, Inc., proprietor of the house, said last night.

Word that the Navy was going to take over the building stirred tenants to action Saturday night and a protest mass meeting was held at the hotel. It was said that approximately 800 residents would be affected.

Many are elderly and have lived at the hotel for a long time. Two, Eva Bullard and Florence Hoagland, are confined to wheel chairs.

Carson said last night that early last week a Navy officer asked to look over the property and made a cursory inspection. "He did not ask me a price nor what the rental rate might be," said Carson.

"The Navy has been looking for quarters for the WAVES and has inspected many buildings. I attach no particular significance to the recent visit of the officer to the Chastleton."

Navy officials refused to comment.

Shepherd Park Talk

The first meeting of the new administration year of the Shepherd Park Citizens Association will be held at 8:15 tonight at the Shepherd School, 14th and Kalmia sts. nw. A short talk and a moving picture entitled "We're in the Army Now," about the WACS, will be presented.

World War I Gains Viewed By Gen Hines

The first World War was not fought in vain, and we shall win the peace after this one, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veterans' Affairs, declared yesterday as Washington marked Armistice Sunday.

"Had our enemies defeated us in the last war, it is possible that we might not be at war today," General Hines said at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church. "But we would be subjected to conditions far worse than those of a nation at war."

"Victorious enemies would have forced us into a bondage so harsh and cruel, that we would have been virtual slaves under the whiplash of oppression," continued the speaker. "That fate at least was spared our Nation, through the sacrifices made and suffering endured in the war 25 years ago."

What Sacrifices Won

The sacrifices of the last war, said General Hines, "enabled us to continue our normal peacetime life as a Nation for more than 20 years and taught us many lessons."

"They enabled us to develop an internal strength so great," he went on, "that when the infamous attack was made upon us two years ago we were able to marshal resources and skills for our protection unrivaled and unapproached in the history of the world."

The speaker said that all signs point toward our "winning the peace this time," and added:

"And I confidently believe that it will be a peace so just, and so firm, that no aggressor can violate it within the time of our children's children."

Among the signs of "winning the peace," he said, were "the outstanding success of the Moscow four-power conference," and the "overwhelming congressional vote for postwar participation in a general international organization for collective security."

General Hines was presented by Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector.

The congregation of Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, First and Rhode Island ave. nw., dedicated a service banner for the church interior in honor of 87 men and women of the church in the armed forces. A. Clark Harris did the unveiling, and Dr. Edgar A. Sexsmith, pastor, preached on "Christianity and Our World Today and Tomorrow."

Manpower Discussion

The Washington Chapter, Society for the Advancement of Management, will discuss the utilization of manpower in Government and industry at a dinner tonight at 6:30 in Barker Hall, YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Speakers will be Robert B. Swope, president of the Southern Oxygen Co. of Washington; Wendell Lund, War Production Board; James F. Grady, War Shipping Administration, and Dr. Eugene B. Bewkes, director of personnel research of the Vick Chemical Co.

Matthew Burns Chosen

Matthew J. Burns, Washington union leader, has been elected two-year president of the International Brotherhood of Papermakers, to take office January 1, is was reported yesterday, at Albany, N. Y., where a convetion was held.

Group Meets Today to Name D. C. Nomniee for Bishop

Washingtonians who will attend as delegates the Episcopal Diocesan Convention on November 23 will meet informally at 1:30 p. m. today to discuss the failure to nominate a Washington clergyman to succeed the late Bishop Freeman, it was learned last night. Four out-of-town candidates have been nominated.

The Rev. Armand Eyler, pastor of St. Margaret's, was understood not to know what the meeting was for, but his wife confirmed the fact it had been called.

The November meeting is scheduled to select the successor to Bishop Freeman.

Frederick S. Tyler, one of the delegates and a vestryman of Ascension Church, complained of politics being played to win the bishop's seat. Tyler said it was a spiritual matter and that "the election of a successor to Bishop Freeman should be on that basis."

Tyler said the most prominent loeal clergymen were the Rev. Charles T. Warren of St. Albans and the Rev. Dr. Sheerin of Epiphany.

According to Tyler the meeting was called by Charles F. Wilson, chancellor of the diocese. Wilson, an attorney, said he had been requested to attend by Rev. Reno Hart of Takoma Park.

It was pointed out that the action of the nominating committee does not prevent the placing in nomination of other clergyman for the post during the meeting on the twenty-third.

Dairy Worker Held Pending Death Inquest

Andrew Monroe Sluss, 65-year-old dairy employe, of 1128 25th st. nw., was being held for investigation last night, pending an inquest at 11:30 a. m. today into the death of William Harrison Johnston, 59-year-old carpenter at the National Zoological Park.

Johnston, of 1116 North Fillmore st., Arlington, Va., was found dead in the hallway of the second floor of 1122 25th st. nw., Saturday midnight. His skull was fractured, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday.

A woman identified by Sluss as his wife lives on the third floor of the house in which Johnston was found, Sergt. Walter Perry of the police homicide squad said. Sluss, however, lives several doors up the street from the wife's home.

"Sluss made a statement in which he admitted coming into the third-floor apartment, finding Johnston there and having a scuffle with him," Sergeant Perry said. "Sluss says he hit Johnston in the nose and walked him out the door, but denies hitting him on the head with any instrument.

"There are two witnesses, however, who were in the apartment and say they saw Sluss carrying a hammer around in his pocket during the evening. None of them saw Sluss hit Johnston with the hammer, however.

Third Precinct police said they were not able to locate the hammer immediately after the body was discovered, but finally found it in the oven of a stove in the kitchen.

President Extends Greetings to United Lutherans on Silver Anniversary

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

President Roosevelt last night urged Lutherans to "work and pray for an enlightened understanding among the nations of the world in which freedom of conscience shall be a cornerstone."

In extending greetings by letter on the national observance of the silver anniversary of the United Lutheran Church in America, the Chief Executive also expressed the hope that the time was nearing when "men everywhere shall have the blessed privilege of worshiping God without interference from any earthly power."

His message, read at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol st., declared:

"It is interesting to note that the United Lutheran Church is a merger of three former groups of Lutherans in this country, the oldest dating back to the year 1619, when the first Lutherans came to America.

"Through all the generations since that faraway year, Lutherans have borne an honorable part in American life. Now, happily, three once separate bodies are unified in one strong body to make common cause against the forces of irreligion and materialism.

"In this solemn service of commemoration," the President's message continued, "you will remember also your co-religionists who have been the victims of such cruel persecution in Germany. From the bitter experience of oppressed Christians in other lands, we shall learn a deeper appreciation of the blessing of civil and religious liberty which is ours through the wisdom and foresight of the Fathers of the Constitution."

More than 1500 Lutherans from Washington and vicinity worshiped at the ubilee service, where a surprise announcement was made of the establishment of the Knubel-Miller Foundation, honoring Dr. Frederick H. Knubel of New York City, the first and only president of the United Lutheran Church in America, and E. Clarence Miller, Philadelphia banker, first and only treasurer.

Dr. Knubel participated in the service, but Miller was unable to attend because of illness. Greetings were read from Lutheran bodies all oyer America.

In announcing the foundation, Dr. Walton H. Greever of New York City, secretary of the United Lutheran Church, explained that it will be in the form of a lectureship that will visit various theological seminaries and centers of religious life.

According to Greever, it will provide for presentation every second or third year a series of lectures by an outstanding churchman on the general theme of "A Better Church Through a Better Ministry." A sum of $5000 already has been raised by private invitation, Dr. Greever said.

Principal speaker was Dr. Paul E. Scherer, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, New York City, a radio preacher on the NBC Sunday vespers.

The Rev. F. Eppling Reinartz, promotional secretary for the United Lutheran Church in America, was liturgist for the services, and Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church and president of the Washington Lutheran Ministerial Association, brought greetings. The choir of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, sang.

The United Lutheran Church, largest of 17 national Lutheran church bodies in the United States and Canada, embraces 4000 congregations, with a confirmed membership of 1,239,800.

Atlantic City Conference Lures Diplomatic Corps From Capital

Wives Remain in Town, While Ambassadors And Ministers Attend Historic Meeting

By Marie McNair

Diplomatic capital for the next few weeks will be Atlantic City and finding an Ambassador in Washington will be as difficult as dodging a tax collector.

That's the reason the wives in the Diplomatic Corps are going around by themselves, if you've noted that fact at any of the round of parties held during the last week. If the chiefs of mission aren't actually delegates to the conference on Relief and Rehabilitation, they are alternates and it's important that they be on hand to sit in at the conference table if the occasion arises. Ambassadors from Poland, the Soviet Union, Norway, Yugoslavia, El Salvador, Honduras and Ministers from South Africa and Luxembourg, are among those who will have part in this notable event.

Out of town also is the Chilean Ambassador, Rodolfo Michels, who has gone to New York with Pedro Castelblanco, president of the Chamber of Deputies of Chile, a visitor here this week. Senor Castelblanco, on the first leg of his tour of this country, will see Chicago and Detroit and will step over into Canada for a short stay. The Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, also left by plane Saturday for Miami, on his way to Argentina for the wedding of his daughter, Betty, to Norberto Quirno Costa, scheduled to take place in the Cathedral in Buenos Aires on November 24. Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz has been there several weeks already, making final plans for the ceremony.

Journalists Had Stories to Tell

With the town pretty gay over the visit of a dozen or so journalists from South America last week, and a party for them every day there's a story or two to tell. They are an enthusiastic group, intensely interested in everything they have seen, and so full of facts on American history that they would put many a student to shame.

Dr. Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, besides being the owner, editor and director of one of Nicaragua's largest newspapers, is in addition a Papal Knight, having received the order in 1920 from Pope Benedict XV. And (or so the story goes), when Dr. Chamorro was in New York before coming to Washington, being a devout churchman, he set out for mass one Sunday morning.

Inquiring the way to St. Patrick's Cathedral he made his way to a nearby church, genuflected, took his seat in the pew. How strange, he thought as the service proceeded; no priestly vestments, no chants, no incense, no golden chalice.

Upon leaving he encountered a member of his group on the avenue just outside the church door: "Well you've gone completely North American," his friend said. "Even to attending the Baptist Church!"

Mexican Cadets Arrive in Town

The newspaper men from below the Rio Grande bid farewell to Washington on Friday. But hard upon their heels have come a group of young cadets to do the town. Mexican-born, the group, 12 or 15 in number, have just received their wings at the Corpus Christi Flying School in Texas, and as a reward are making this trip to the Capital before going back to Mexico. On Saturday they met some of the young diplomatic set at a party given by the Naval Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Garcia Jurado, who entertained at the Statler.

Also a visitor in town for the weekend is the Marquesa de Cueva, granddaughter of the late John D. Rockefeller, a guest of the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas. Accompanied by her sub-deb daughter, the Marquesa is on her way to Florida for the season. The Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas entertained a small company at dinner Sturday evening in honor of the visitor.

The wedding took place at Christ Church in Corning, with the Rev. Roger Alling officiating at the 4 o'clock service. Miss Adelaide Cole, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and Laura DeKay Houghton was the flower girl for her sister. A reception followed at the Knoll.

Dennie Lewis And Wife Give Informal Party

Like all events at the A. D. (Dennie) Lewis' menage, last night's cocktail party and buffet supper there was gay, informal and pleasant.

More than 50 guests, including members of residential and official circles dropped in "after 6" at the Lewis home on Garfield st. The rooms were bedecked for the occasion, with vases of talisman roses, and the buffet tables were centered with huge baskets of gold and bronze chrysanthemums.

Following supper, the guests gathered in the living room to hear some songs, sung by Mrs. Walter Maloney, wife of the former Commissioner of the Bituminous Coal Commission. Later they saw some colored films taken by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis in Europe during the summer of 1938, when he was attending a conference in Geneva.

Work of Coast Guard Welfare Occupies Mrs. Russell Waesche

Wife of Commandant of U. S. Coast Guard Interested in Problems of Servicemen

By Peggy Preston

"She doesn't act like an admiral's wife, does she?"

A SPAR, glimpsing Mrs. Russell R. Waesche, wife of Vice Admiral Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard, admiringly whispered this comment the other afternoon at the corps headquarters. Brown-eyed, tweed-clad Mrs. Waesche was good-naturedly making her way to the Coast Guard Welfare Office and was tossing friendly greetings en route.

Friendly is indeed the word for this wife of the first officer of the United States Coast Guard. A decidedly forthright and frank person, she has not become rank conscious during her 13 years in Washington's official circle.

It is a quality that stands her in good stead in carrying out the job she has inherited as wife of the Coast Guard commandant. She is now, and has been for several years past, vice chairman of the Coast Guard Welfare, an organization operating on the lines of Navy Relief, and one that makes considerable demands on her energy and time.

Welfare Work Is Greatly Expanded

"My work is mostly of an advisory nature now," she explains in elaborating on the job being done by the national group in aiding families of servicemen. "Since the war we have expanded to such an extent that the national committee has a full-time job on its hands clearing and passing on various cases sent in from the auxiliary groups all over the country."

A native New Yorker, throaty-voiced Mrs. Waesche has been living in Washington since her marriage to the admiral 13 years ago. Together with their 10-year-old son they make their home in Chevy Chase. The admiral's three other sons by a former marriage are all off to the war, two in the Coast Guard, and one, . . . a rebel, is in the Army.

Waesche Family Lives Quietly in Suburbs

Both she and Admiral Waesche enjoy sports, but during these busy war days they find little time to indulge in hobbies. The admiral, her young son, a servantless house and her work with the Coast Guard Welfare absorb her days, she admits.

Mrs. Waesche's only argument with the Coast Guard is that it separates her all too frequently from her husband. His duties take him on numerous cross-country jaunts, trips upon which she cannot accompany him. And on those few occasions when she can go along, the admiral must go by plane in order to be back at his desk the sooner. "Which leaves me out completely," she reflects. "For the very thought of a plane ride is too much for me. I'm afraid I'll have to become modernized before this war is over if I want to keep up with my husband."

Mrs. J. M. Souby Gives Luncheon

Mrs. James M. Souby entertained at luncheon on Saturday at her residence at 2101 Connecticut ave.

Among her guests were Senora de Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Lady Dixon, wife of the Australian Minister; Mme. Rybar, wife of the Counselor of the Yugoslav Embassy; Mrs. Henry A. Grady, Mrs. Allen Smith, Mrs. Ernest E. Norris, Mrs. William H. Davis, Mrs. Palmer Hoyt, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. George Bradford and others.

Col., Mrs. Guggenheim Entertain Servicemen

In another of their series of Sunday night suppers for groups of convalescent officers from military hospitals in Washington, Col. and Mrs. Robert M. Guggenheim last night were hosts at their home on Broad Branch Road.

Invited to meet the 15 young officers were some 30 or more guests, who arrived at 6 and remained following the buffet supper for a program of informal music.

Down Virginia Way

A CHRISTENING . . . not of a ship, but a baby, will hold the interest of Virginians this week.

The baby, a member of one of Virginia's most distinguished families, will be baptized on Sunday, November 21, at "Holland House," in Alexandria. Her name is Merle Andree Fleming-Holland, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Fleming-Holland.

Mistress Merle will make her debut to the family clans attired in a robe trimmed with yards of Alencon lace, lace worn first by Betsy Patterson of Baltimore on the day she wed Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the Emperor Napoleon. Mrs. Consolvo, formerly Miss Mary Byrd, inherited the lace from Miss Mary Patterson of Baltimore.

Lieut. Brooke Armat of Fredericksburg, formerly of Washington, who is to be named godfather at the christening, has just been called overseas. Acting as his proxy will be Taylor Burke of Alexandria. Dr. Albert Mollegan, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, will officiate at the ceremony and a tea will follow at Holland House, home of the baby's aunt, Mrs. Berenice Fleming-Holland.

The baby's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Fleming-Holland are making their home at Holland House. She is the former Merle Rutherford. Dr. Fleming-Holland's parents are at present in Athens, Greece, where they have been living for some years. Mistress Merle Andree Fleming-Holland was born on September 15.

The bride-elect was graduated from Bryn Mawr and attended law school at George Washington University. Her father was the late William F. Walsh, Standard Oil executive, of New York, and she is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Francis Walsh of Richmond. Lieutenant Jones was graduated from Yale University and Sheffield Scientific School. The wedding will take place in the early winter.

Mrs. Nathaniel H. Morison, president of the Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club, held the last meeting of the year at her home, Welbourne, near Middleburg, the past week, when she entertained the members at a luncheon party.

At the business meeting afterward, Mrs. Morison, who has been a popular president for three years, gave in her resignation and officers for 1943-44 were elected. Mrs. Reginald Vickers of The Plains was elected president; Mrs. Thomas U. Dudley of Middleburg, secretary; Mrs. Warner Snider of Leesburg, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edwin Rust, treasurer; Mrs. Thomas Atkinson of Middleburg, first vice president; Mrs. Thomas Fendall, second vice president, and Miss Lilias Janney, third vice president.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Taught by Mother That It's Disgrace to Be An Old Maid, and That Marriage for Money Is Best, Girl, 27, Weighs Tasteless Offer

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 27 years old. I came to Washington several years ago to work for the Government. There were two reasons for the move. One,—conditions at home are crowded and dirty, as we live in the heart of the city. And the other,—the fact that I was getting along in the twenties, and was still unmarried. This mattered very much to my mother, whose life ambition is to see me happily married. Her version of a happy marriage is a marriage of security. Since her own marriage was one of insecurity, poverty and unhappiness, this is not hard to understand. Also, she considers it a disgrace to be an old maid.

I have never lacked for boy friends; but never having been in love with those who proposed, I refused them. For the past several months, I have been seeing a man of my own age, who can offer everything in the way of security. He is not physically attractive; but I respect him for his intelligence. That's about the strongest feeling I can conjure up. He is very much in love with me; and his family have taken me to their hearts and are willing for us to marry. My mother is overjoyed, which makes it very hard to contemplate turning him down. I would not marry him,—this I know definitely,—if I did not think this is my last chance to marry. I feel that the boys who come back after the war will look for younger girls. Can you advise me? N. W. C.

Positive Rapport Needed in Marriage

DEAR N. W. C.: Your definite conviction that you would not marry this man if you did not reckon him your last chance at matrimony is really a veiled admission that he is physically repugnant to you. And since your best efforts to conjure up a positive feeling-interest in him result only in toneless respect for his intelligence, it is a thousand-to-one bet that you could scarcely abide him in the intimacy of marriage,—a relationship in which harmonious interdependence of personality and sympathetic interplay of mind cannot exist without positive sexual congeniality, the latent possibility of which is indicated, during courtship, by a mutually realized physical accord.

ALTHOUGH the existence of reciprocal physical attraction does not necessarily augur the dawning of real love between man and woman, that element of rapport is an absolutely essential ingredient of married love,—if for no other reason than to make tolerable the bond of continuous familiar association with the "life partner." The degree of intensity of physical attraction is not so important as the fact of spontaneously feeling some positive approval in that regard. Ardor is relative, with one's minim-to-maximum potentials of feeling directly determined by native temperament. But at least one may know with certainty whether one's crucial emotional reaction to a prospective husband (or wife) is negative,—i. e., instinctively prohibitive;—or positive,—i. e., instinctively favorable and friendly.

Far Better to Build On Serene Philosophy

AND BECAUSE there is no doubt that your reaction to this man is disturbingly negative,—bordering on revulsion even in the neutralizing social climate of arms'-length courtship, my advice is: Don't marry him. To do so would be to cheat yourself,—and him!—out of your birthright prerogative of making a good marriage with some positively congenial and therefore splendidly inspiring helpmeet. Anxious haste to employ this prerogative can injure your chance of realizing this expectation in joyous measure, to a greater extent than the passing of years ever could. Some of the best marriages are made comparatively late in life by those who possess the serenity and confidence and fine personal integrity to brook no compromise with their heart's true desire. They have said to themselves, in the words of John Burroughs: "I stand amid the eternal ways, And what is mine shall know my face. Asleep, awake, by night or day, The friends I seek are seeking me. No wind can drive my bark astray, Nor change the tide of destiny."

AS FOR YOUR theory that "the boys who come back after the war will look for younger girls,"—the director of a local USO recreation center for servicemen reported, some months ago, that boys returned from battle show an obstinate, practically unanimous preference for the company of older girls and women; and seem actually to shun the society of the jitter-bug dancing young things who had been their favorites before. Sobered in mind by the responsibilities and hardships they have borne; and aged in spirit by the violence, grief and suffering they have known, these young-old men turn to women of comparable psychological maturity for the solace of sympathetic feminine companionship, when they come back home. M. H.

Overweight Caused by Indulgence

By Ida Jean Kain

The thing women dislike most about middle age is the spread that comes with it. Actually, age is not to blame. It is the gradual penalty of the habit of taking too large quantities of food and drink at one sitting, combined with too little activity for the muscles of your natural girdle, plus a careless posture.

The stomach is a muscular organ that stretches to accommodate an astonishing amount of food. With the habit of overeating, your stomach stays stretched and your appetite is enlarged accordingly. When that happens, it really does take more food to fill you up. This process goes right on until you call a halt.

Before you can start to shrink your stomach, you have to stop overeating. Quit eating before you feel filled up. You just have to be strong-minded enough to get up from the table before you feel completely satisfied. This is something you will have to prove to yourself, but 10 minutes later you won't be hungry.

To be sure, there's a catch. You must get your protective foods every day and that means eating the essential foods first. What you do not eat is a second helping of the mashed sweet potato, or more creamed chicken, or another roll. You eat one helping of everything and have dessert, if any, on the light side.

You must watch the amount of liquid you take with the meal, too, for excess liquid has just as much to do with stretching the stomach as solid food. This does not mean water is fattening or that you can't have all you want in between meals. But you should not take over 6 to 8 ounces of any kind of liquid with your meal. When you drink a cup of coffee, let that be all the liquid you have with that meal. When you have a glass of milk—and you should have two glasses a day—don't drink any water. Some of the movie stars are so particular about this rule that they don't have any beverages with the meal and drink their milk in between. They claim it is more slimming that way.

Since salt holds water in the tissues, it is a good idea for anyone inclined to be overweight to use salt very moderately.

Penicillin Soon To Be Within Reach of All

By Logan Clendenning, M.D.

By the time this report reaches you, the new germ-killing drug, penicillin, may be available for general use by anyone. Up to now only a few physicians have been allowed to employ it.

There has been a great demand for it among the armed forces. But it is hoped that within a short time everyone who needs it can obtain it.

This delay has been necessary and well spent. A committee of experienced American physicians has been investigating its value, what cases it should be used in, the dosage, etc. Their report is now available.

Penicillin belongs to that new group of drugs which kill germs in the body. The difficulties in the way of doing this can be understood when it is explained that the drug must select the germ to kill and not harm the body cells in which the germ is growing.

Many drugs have been tried without success. With the introduction of the sulfa drugs, however, it was shown that such a thing could happen. These are truly wonder-working agents, but they do not affect all germs. Tuberculosis, for example, they do not touch.

One of the greatest values of penicillin is its effectiveness in many cases that are resistant to sulfa drugs.

Its greatest use has been among infections from those coccic germs (staphylococci) that the sulfa drugs were never very effective against.

While it can be used in pneumonia and meningitis successfully, it is probably better to use the sulfa drugs here since they have been so effective.

In the treatment of infected compound fractures of certain kinds, penicillin works very well when applied directly to the wound.

A disadvantage is that it has to be given hypodermically or in the vein, or applied directly to the infection. It does not work when taken by mouth as do the sulfa drugs. The dosage has now been worked out by this committee with great care.

It does not seem to be as toxic as are the sulfa drugs at times. They occasionally cause a bad general reaction, but the committee is very encouraging in their comments along this line.

Democracy Dinner

President—Ladies, as you know, Dr. Thomas Jefferson Level is to speak at our annual Democracy Day dinner on "The Little People in the World of Tomorrow." We will hear the report of the committee on distinguished guests. Mrs. Joyner.

Mrs. Joyner—Madam President, our committee is in a dilemma. The number of distinguished guests we have is far too great for the head table.

Mrs. Joyner—But these are all extremely important women.

Mrs. Flytie—Madame President, why couldn't we have just the more important of the important women?

Mrs. Preen—May I interrupt to say that I think we should make this a very smart event and that we should have only the smarter looking of the more important women at the head table?

Mrs. McAddle—Oh, if it's smart-looking women we want, I have a little friend who's a corset buyer——

Mrs. Flint—I rise to a point of order.

President—Please read your list of distinguished guests, Mrs. Joyner.

Mrs. Joyner—Well, since of course we wanted this to have an international flavor we have included the Archduchess of Pyrex, the Viscountess Fez, the Marquesa de Tortilla——

Mrs. Flagg—Madam President, I object! Why should we have any foreigners eating up all our food?

Mrs. Chirp—Oh, Madam President! As chairman of food I'd like to say before I forget it that the best the hotel can give us is creamed haddock in a nest of macaroni.

President—Please proceed with your list, Mrs. Joyner.

Mrs. Joyner—Then, of course, there's Mrs. Bigwigger and Mrs. Nabob and Mrs. Caliph and Mrs.——

Dr. Nannie B. Hopper—Question of information! What have these women ever done?

Mrs. Joyner—Why they're the wives of our most important officials!

Dr. Hopper—Why should they ride in on the coattails of their husbands? Why don't we have honor guests who have done something?

Mrs. Preen—But those women as a rule are not very smart-looking——

President — Please proceed with the list.

Mrs. Joyner—Then of course we'll have to have Mrs. Swagg and Mrs. Luker and Mrs. Wadd—especially if we take up any funds for our Democracy Foundation after the dinner.

Dr. Hopper—Aren't we going to have any women who have done things—I mean really done things?

Mrs. Joyner—Oh, yes, we have Mrs. Persiflage Clipper—she's been on several best-dressed lists, and Mrs. Radcliffe Uppercut, who recently launched a battleship, and Mrs. Sinbad Smith-Smythe——

Mrs. Flagg—Just a minute! That last name sounds as if it were British to me. I am opposed to any foreigners.

Mrs. Joyner—Mrs. Smith-Smythe is an American citizen. She was a Flitterjig—one of the Virginia Flitterjigs, you know Lorillard Flitterjig, who was a descendant of Lord Bollweevil——

Mrs. Flint—I rise to a point of order!

President—Ladies, we don't have time to discuss each guest separately.

Dr. Hopper—I suggest that we eliminate those who haven't done anything but marry rich or prominent men.

Mrs. Flagg—I suggest we eliminate all but native-born Americans who can give the full names of 16 grandparents.

Mrs. Joyner—We simply can't eliminate any of the important women on our list. There would be repercussions.

Mrs. McAddle—Why don't we just enlarge the head table?

Mrs. Joyner—It can't be enlarged without going through the wall.

Mrs. Whipper—I have an idea! Why don't we have a series of head tables and grade—I mean seat the distinguished guests at them according to their—er standing and—er prominence?

Mrs. Preen—Yes, and according to their decorative effect.

"Pistol Packin' Mamma" on Repertoire Of Montgomery County Potomac Band

Amateur Group Goes Modern, After 20 Years of Marches

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

For the first time since its organization nearly 20 years ago, the Potomac Band in Montgomery County, Md., has gone modern. When the music lovers, 20 of them, who play just for a hobby, report to rehearsal Tuesday night at the Potomac School, they will make a try at "Pistol Packin' Mamma" if the orchestration ordered has arrived.

Never before has the band, known for its excellent playing of famous serenades and marches, turned to popular music. But several of the younger members whose fathers are in the band convinced the older musicians to include the present song hit in its repertoire. To keep in trend with wartime music theme songs of the Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard are scheduled on this season's programs. A nonprofit group as far as benefits and church affairs are concerned the band stands ready to entertain hospitalized servicemen or any affair connected with the war effort—just for the asking. Although out of practice for a year due to gasoline rationing and the ban on nonessential driving, the band is again in full swing, practicing weekly. Members are wondering why they haven't been invited to offer their talents to our wounded men back from the battlefronts. Even though most of the players live in the rural part of the county between 20 and 25 miles away from downtown Washington, a spokesman for the group said they will find a way by pooling their cars to play for a worthwhile cause.

Fathers and Sons Play in Band

Ranging in ages from 12 to 55 years, the band consists of 20 persons with 11 of the original members still active and five of these with sons in the band. Only girl member is 16-year-old Betty Thrift, who with her brother, Max Thrift, make a good cornet duo. Their father, Charles Thrift, a charter member, died two weeks ago. Two of its members are now playing in the armed forces, William Walker, with the Marines and Max Snouffer in the Army.

The Potomac Band needs introduction only to newcomers of the county. Whenever there's a county-wide event, residents are sure to find the band participating, whether it's in a firemen's parade, a horse show, the Rockville Fair or a political rally.

For the latter type of affair the band charges a fee, but as one member pointed out "We keep politics out of the band." During election years it has made a small fortune, often known to play for one party afternoons and for its opponents the same nights.

Once a year the band puts on its own benefit to swell its treasury. Hundreds flock to its annual picnic supper, followed by a concert which brings in as much as $300—enough to keep the musicians trim in their blue and white uniforms and replace their instruments.

H. Preston Stearn Is Band Leader

Organized in June, 1925 with 25 members each person then contributed $20 to purchase instruments consisting of 7 cornets, 3 altos, 3 trombones, 2 tenors, 1 baritone, 2 saxaphones, 3 clarinets and 2 drums, from a mail-order house. Later they bought new instruments for $3500 with funds raised at their dances, minstrel shows and picnics. Now the band is entirely out of debt and has a sum in its treasury.

H. Preston Stearn whose father, Earl Stearn, is an original member, is the band leader.

Two traditions the band still clings to are the Tuesday night rehearsals and the meeting place in the Potomac School where the original 25 assembled in the basement of the one-time frame school to practice by the light of kerosene lamps.

Popular Organization Is Heard at Many Benefit Parties

New Members Being Added Constantly

Another custom the band has kept up through the years is concluding its concerts with "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." So inspired by the band when it played on his estate in Glen, Md., summer evenings, Minner Hostetler, prominent lumberman, joined the group to play a tenor horn, just last week. Also among the newest members are Joseph Clagett, husband of the former Nancy Leiter of Washington, and the Finneyfrock brothers, Lee and Buster, 16 and 15.

Others in the band are Walter Myers, Gilbert and Albert Henderson, brothers; Charles Snouffer, father of Max, Eddie Harden and son, Eddie, jr.; Russell Watkins, Anson Ball and son, Anson, jr.; Paul Mills, Lloyd Nicholson and son, Lloyd "Sonny," jr., and Vernon McCrossan.

So seekers of good entertainment need only to call Mr. Myers, band president, for an engagement.

It has made recordings and has given many programs over the old WJSV radio station. The idea of turning their neighbors' musical talents into nights which might have been boresome was conceived by Russell Watkins, Charles Snouffer, W. T. Ricketts and the late W. Scott Collins.

Aprons Step Into Stellar Role As Vital Household Necessity

No longer do aprons hide their light in the kitchen. They've shed their Cinderella aspect and stepped into a stellar role. Most women are now doing their own housework, and they insist on looking attractive while doing it.

Dry-cleaning difficulties also make it advisable to cover up a pet dress when doing dirty work at the office, in school, or at home.

With the aid of a pattern, which you can cut out from a newspaper to suit your own whim, you may have a protective supply of easily laundered cotton aprons.

"Snack" aprons offer unlimited opportunities to the women who has a scrap bag. She may devise a patchwork fantasy from bits of material left over from her house dresses. A "hit and miss" apron (like one of Grandmother's "crazy" quilts) is pretty, too. Or maybe you'd like to sew all the colors of the rainbow together and gather them on a waistband. How about a huge square of flowered chintz with a pocket running the length of the hem? Or try an oval one with a full ruffle all the way around.

When there's lap work to be done, such as Red Cross sewing or knitting, a waist-length apron will keep off the lint and keep you unwrinkled above. Those that go all the way around to protect the rear as well as front approach are a perfect choice.

You may need to bolster your supply with some that are designed for hard work. Take striped bed ticking for any indoor or outdoor chores or blue and white checked denim with wide tool pockets. The pinafore types in sanforized cotton are pert with peasant braid and heart pockets.

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat

Surprise Hit—Barbecued Lamb Shanks!
If it's variety your family wants... and most families do... surprise them tonight with this tangy, meat-flavored feast of Barbecued Lamb Shanks. It's yours to serve for only a fraction of a point per person... which makes it a grand wartime meal.
Ask your meat man for 3 lamb shanks which come to about 3 pounds all together. And be sure to specify Armour's lamb. It's young and tender. And its rich mild flavor adds a lot to the enjoyment of this dish.
Melt 1 tbsp. Armour's Star Lard in a heavy frying pan and brown lamb shanks. Then fix barbecue sauce this way.
Combine 1 cup chopped onions, ½ tsp. pepper, 2 tsps. sugar, 1 tsp. dry mustard, 1 tsp. paprika, 4 tsps. Worcestershire sauce, ¼ tsp. Tabasco sauce, ½ cup catsup, ¼ cup vinegar and ½ cup water.
Pour this sauce over meat, cover and bake in 350° F. oven 2 hours or until tender. A good way to extend the meat flavor is to serve barbecued lamb shanks over fluffy rice as shown above. Serves 6.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The British Do It Again In 'Jeannie', a Little Gem

AFTER HAVING RUN for two years in London, "Jeannie," the British-made Tansa Film, has reached America and is a sensation at the Little Carnegie Theater in New York . . . Capacity business has prolonged its run and caused the management to buy off others of the theater's commitments . . . The Broadway critics have unanimously extolled the film . . . So have Life Magazine, Leonard Lyons and most of the other main line columnists and commentators . . . So on Saturday morning Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, the mainsprings of the Little Theater—where it will open Wednesday—screened it for the drama desks to see if they agreed with the general verdict . . . They did . . . It would be impossible not to . . . "Jeannie" is a gem—a Cinderella comedy-drama that possesses the greatness of simplicity and dignity, along with the quiet humor of a warm and delightful little story, charmingly told and beautifully acted . . . This picture probably never could have been made in Hollywood with anything like its present perfection . . . It would have been overdressed and glamorized into complete oblivion and no doubt death . . . As interpreted by Barbara Mullen, Michael Redgrave and their associate players, it comes off as one of THE pictures of this or any other year . . . One doubts that Miss Mullen ever would have been assigned to the title role on this side, although she is American-born . . . Britain, however, had the courage to take the plain little unknown dancer-actress and afford her the opportunity to grace the screen with one of the few flawless and marvelously sensitive portrayals it has ever been permitted to toss back at a grateful public . . . Wait until you see her! . . . And don't confuse her with Brock Pemberton's "Janie" . . . Jeannie McLean is in a class by herself.

BARBARA MULLEN

No Unemployment Problem on This Lot

More players are currently engaged in production at the Warner Brothers' Burbank studios than at any other time in the company's history, according to their latest bit of bragging, just plucked from the mail . . . If the paper shortage would permit the publication of the names of all the stars and featured players now before the cameras in "Rhapsody in Blue," "Passage to Marseille," "Uncertain Glory," "The Animal Kingdom," "Outward Bound" and "Mr. Skeffington," they would add up to 102 . . . And in addition to that, the Freres W. have "Mask for Dimitrios," "My Reputation," "Never Goodbye," "Janie," "The Horn Blows at Midnight" and "The Devil, George and Rosie" ready and r'arin' to go . . . Speaking of such, Burbank has arranged to borrow Reginald Gardner for two of its numbers . . . He will be the Jim Fiske, with Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan, Alexis Smith, Jack Carson and Jane Wyman, in "One More Tomorrow," and then go into "The Horn Blows at Midnight," with Jack Benny, Alexis Smith and Dolores Moran—which won't hurt either of them in the slightest . . . Reminded by their unaccustomed repletion, the drayma desks are conscious of having been particularly well fed last week . . . In addition to the banqueteering in Philadelphia last Wednesday night, Mrs. Miller and Mr. Tolkins—mostly Mrs. Miller—followed Saturday's screening of "Jeannie" with a Lucullum luncheon . . . Boy, am I glad I inadvertently paid no attention to that note on my desk to "Call Mr. Foster L. Smith at the Statler" . . . Could maybe have put the bite on him for a coupla bucks, at that!

There Are, It Seems, a Lot of "Rascals"

To answer the inquiries that have been springing up in profusion where none used to grow—ever since the announcement that the Sidney Lust Maryland Theaters would be playing Borrah Minevitch's Harmonica Rascals this week—NO, Johnny Puleo, Washington's diminutive pantomimist, is not a member of this group . . . His sister, Miss Louise H. Puleo, advises me that Johnny is with the edition of the Rascals that has been in the Empire Room at the Palmer House in Chicago since last August and will be until they open in Boston's Statler Hotel after Christmas . . . There should be a thought there, incidentally, for Helen Hamilton, Maria Kramer, the local Statler, Herb Sach's Del Rio, or some other top night spot . . . The Lust roundup of Rascals is said to be equally a "smash" . . . Barbara Hale, the "Sinatrella Girl," who hit the jackpot when she was chosen to play opposite Frank, the Swooner, in "Higher and Higher," seems to be going in that direction . . . RKO-Radio now has popped her into the second feminine lead with Pat O'Brien in "Marine Raiders" . . . Miss Hale formerly was hailed as a Chicago model . . . The biggest laugh in "Guadalcanal Diary" comes along when the boys on the island are trying to get a "crooshell" baseball game over the radio . . . What they get is a howl to everyone but them . . . You'll find out . . . Personal aside to Ernie Pyle and Manager Bob Etris of the Ambassador Theater: Thanks for the cordial notes . . . With two legitimate theaters now operating regularly, Baltimore soon will be getting a pre-Broadway peek at William Saroyan's "Get Away, Old Man" . . . Not booked for Washington, as I understand it . . . Any Saroyan first night is an experience.

What's-the-World-Coming-To Note

HEDDA HOPPER

'Cross Your Fingers'!

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 14.—Gracie McDonald will do a new musical "Cross Your Fingers" before leaving for New York and a musical comedy back there. Three bands already have been engaged—Freddie Slack, Harry Owens, Ted Weems. Leon Errol's in it, with Eddie Cline directing. I always maintain Eddie should be in his own pictures. His offstage clowning sometimes is better than the acting on the screen . . . Warners rolled out the red carpet for Kitty Carlisle's test and gave her a 60-piece orchestra to boot. But they haven't signed her yet. Al Bloomingdale wants her back in New York for a musical . . . Shirley Temple's fallen hook, line, and sinker for a soldier encamped in Oklahoma, who telephones her collect. She loves it, but her father, also her manager, is going slowly mad . . . When Paramount officials heard what Veronica Lake said to the wife of the commanding officer when she did a guest spot with Bob Hope, they decided to keep her out of Army and Navy camps. Her language isn't the kind that builds up goodwill.

Could Be

Olivia De Havilland and John Houseman are mighty chummy these days. Could mean that he wants her for his first Paramount production . . . If Claudette Colbert could have heard a soldier at the canteen say it was worth living 21 years just to see her and get her autograph, she wouldn't hesitate about going again . . . Milton Holmes, who authored "Mr. Lucky," sold two more stories to Buddy De Sylvia—"Torch Song," which sounds as though it might be for Dottie Lamour, and an untitled comedy. His "Salty O'Rourke" was ready for Alan Ladd when Alan was taken into the Army. Now that he's out, he'll probably do it.

Loyalty, That's What

You've got to hand it to Barbara Stanwyck. Warners have three dress designers, and she'll make "My Reputation" there, but she insists upon having Edith Head design all her clothes for the picture . . . During all these eight months of Lou Costello's illness, Universal has paid Bud Abbott and Costello their full salary. Gosh, when I think of what happens to you on the stage! If you miss one show, you're docked. Then folks tell you those were the good old days. In a way, they were, too, for everything except your bank account.

MOVIES: Marlene Dietrich, making a new picture, saw the first week's rushes, and complained that she didn't look well enough to suit her . . . The cameraman working in this new picture is the same one who photographed her in "The Garden of Allah," a picture which the star says is one of her favorites. And so she and the cameraman went to a projection room, where "The Garden of Allah" was shown for them. When it was over, she said: "There, do you see? I looked gorgeous in that picture. Why can't we get the same result in the picture we're doing now?" . . . "Well, you see, Miss Dietrich," the cameraman tactfully told her, "I'm eight years older now."

TRAVEL DEPT.: When the five touring Senators visited the Mediterranean front, one of them was told the story of the trip made by a few Senators shortly after the close of the last war. They arrived in Venice, and were greeted by the local officials who showed them the city . . . "What a beautiful Italian city," said one of the Senators. "How horrible of those Germans to have flooded it."

POLITICS: Last year, when Leon Henderson was head of OPA, Senators Guffey and Herring blamed him for many of the election losses, because of his refusal to make his appointments on a political basis. Guffey publicly stated that Henderson was responsible for the election of eight Republican Senators . . . "I'm in a helluva fix," Henderson sighed. "The Democrats hand me the blame and the Republicans won't hand me the credit" . . . After last week's elections, Senator Happy Chandler met Henderson and said: "Well, Leon—are they going to blame you for this one?"

Moss Hart set his Air Force show, "Winged Victory," in a typical Midwest town, "Mapleton, Ohio"—which also was the setting for "Lady in the Dark," "The American Way" and "The Man Who Came to Dinner" . . . Federal officials grabbed Joe Adonis' cousin, for bootlegging . . . Under Secretary of the Interior Abe Fortas, who was to have headed a mission to the Middle East, instead has begun his apprenticeship as a seaman.

ILLUSTRATED SECTION: Representative Starnes of Alabama succeeded in cutting from the war budget $100,000 which had been requested for an art recording program. "Photographs are sufficient. Paintings won't do," said Starnes, who convinced Congress . . . Reeves Lewenthal, who was executive director of the art program, thereupon got the Abbott Laboratory to back this project and to present the paintings to the U. S. Navy . . . The National Gallery in Washington, on November 21, will exhibit these paintings, together with photos covering the same subject, "Naval Aviation from Preflight to Combat." Some of America's best-known artists did the paintings. The photos were made under the supervision of Comdr. Ed Steichen, the famed photographer. This will not be by way of competition, but to show that each can supplement the other. The paintings will be exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum in January, then the Boston Museum, and then in a coast-to-coast tour.

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: William Wyler, the film director who received the Air Medal in London, was addressing a group of British reporters. "When you were in London, eight years ago, you announced that you were here to find an ideal screen hero and listed specifications," one of the reporters told him. "Has the war changed your mind about those specifications?" . . . "No. The war has confirmed them," replied Wyler. "Look at the clippings. You'll find that I specified that the ideal screen hero should have Clark Gable's head, Gary Cooper's mouth, Leslie Howard's hands, Francis X. Shields nose, Charles Boyer's eyes and Robert Taylor's personality . . . Gable and Shields are in the Army, Taylor is in the Navy, Cooper is in Australia, Boyer was in the French Army and Howard was killed while serving his country."

Trans-Lux Medley

From the Far East and Burma, through New Guinea to Italy, the war's fighting fronts are reflected in the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater. The Allied command is shown on the other side of the globe, and in Italy General Eisenhower joins Gen. Mark W. Clark to view the progress of the United States Fifth Army. Out at Walter Reed Hospital, the repatriated American war prisoners are pictured and eventually the news section gets around to general topics and important sports events.

"Glimpses of Mexico," a Fitz-Patrick Traveltalk; "Journey to Yesterday," "Storm," one of the "Passing Parade" series; "Cloud Chasers," an interesting "Sportscope," and "Nursery Crimes," a cartoon comedy for a touch of laughter, are the short subjects that give the program fine balance.

By Drew Pearson

THE COAST-TO-COAST stop-Willkie tour of handsome, urbane John Hamilton seems to be getting nowhere fast. Reports from the West Coast are that everyone is glad to see the popular former GOP National Committee chairman, but that he offers nothing for something.

In Seattle last week, for instance, he told Republican friends that he thought Tom Dewey would be nominated, but that Roosevelt would beat him. Reaction of Hamilton's listeners was negative. They felt he radiated, without intending to do so, a defeatist attitude.

In Seattle, Hamilton was the guest of live-wire young Republican Fred Baker. Though Baker is for Willkie, he took pains to see that Hamilton talked to all groups of Republicans—Deweyites, Brickerites, AFL leaders, women's organizations, county leaders, and State legislators.

Hamilton proposed as proper GOP timber one of the following four: General MacArthur, Governor Warren of California, Governor Saltonstall of Massachusetts, Governor Baldwin of Connecticut. He described Bricker as a great disappointment.

John described himself as representing a group of people in big States with heavy electoral votes who were dead set against Willkie and wanted to see what other candidates sat well with the country. He shied away from giving details as to who were in the group of prominent Republicans he represented, though he did not deny being backed by Pennsylvania's Oil Man Pew. This, of course, was taken for granted.

Doris Duke's Dogs

New Deal Glamour Girl Evie Robert, champion of underprivileged dogs, was busy some time ago organizing a Tail-Wagger's Club to help rescue stray curs.

She conceived the idea of enlisting blue blood dogs as charter members, and approached Doris Duke Cromwell, richest woman in the world, now suing her husband for divorce.

Doris had 12 dogs, and Evie proposed that if they were all enrolled in the Tail-Wagger's Club it would make the pet club fashionable, and lesser lights would follow suit. Doris consented.

"All right," concluded Evie, "that makes your 12 dogs members and you owe me $1 apiece membership dues, a total of $12."

"What!" exclaimed the richest woman in the world. "You didn't tell me about that. I'll have to think it over more carefully. Send me some literature."

Capital Chaff

JOHN D. M. HAMILTON is getting around $25,000 a year and expenses from Joe Pew, in part for his work against Willkie. How things change. Four years ago, Pew was the man who helped select Willkie. . . . Big finance interests are lining up for Bricker—Equitable Life, U. S. Steel, insurance and various banking houses. He also has strong church support. . . . Admiral Adolphus Andrews, recently retired from the Eastern Defense Command, has been offered $100,000 a year by an unnamed commercial outfit. . . . Ann Corio, the strip-tease artist, was turned down by the Red Cross when she applied for overseas duty with the "distress corps" because she was not a college graduate. . . . The War Department has sent instructions to all motorized units to get along with their present tires. Just one indication of how tight tires are going to be. . . . The Poles are burned up by what happened at Moscow.

Congress Was Warned

Despite the dangerous shortage of doctors and dentists, the House Appropriations Committee slashed a one million dollar request by the United States Public Health Service from the Supplemental Defense bill.

However, what most observers missed was the fact that this same committee less than six months ago disapproved a $175,000 request for medical relief on the ground that the request should have been bigger!

The one million dollar fund was to enable the relocation of 600 doctors and dentists in areas where they are desperately needed, and was vetoed despite warnings by War Manpower's Dr. Frank H. Lahey, the American Medical Association, the American Dental Association, and the War and Navy Departments that in some areas there was only one physician to every 3000 civilians.

But the committee butchered the one million dollars just the same.

In contrast, here is how the same committee ruled last May on a $175,000 request for relocating 70 physicians:

"The committee is well aware that the shortage of physicians in many sections of the country is acute, but considers that any program which would provide for the services of only 70 physicians is so ineffective as to be unjustifiable.

"The committee is willing to give consideration to any type of program which the Public Health Service may suggest to meet the need in a more adequate manner."

Merry-Go-Round

There is so much up-and-down-hill fighting in Italy that the Fifth Army looks with envy on the Italian burro. General Clark has wired the War Department, "Please send mules" . . . In 1935, before Mussolini invaded Ethiopia, he practically denuded Missouri, Arkansas and Texas of mules. The Italian government bought about 300,000 . . . Inside reason for withdrawal of Dominican Ambassador J. M. Troncoso from Washington is that Dominican Dictator Trujillo is displeased at not being invited to visit the White House. Most other Latin Presidents have been invited, but F. D. R. sticks to Sumner Welles' ban against Trujillo . . . Recent addition to the Cuban Embassy is Col. Eugenio Silva, whose polo-playing once won the praise of Mrs. Warren G. Harding, with the result that Silva gave her his horse . . . Instead of polo ponies, Col. Silva recently bought 500 phonograph machines and 500 sets of records, for teaching basic English to Cuban soldiers.

Revival at Pix

With pioneer railroading and the Old West as its background, Cecil B. De Mille's "Union Pacific," revived this week on the screen at the Pix Theater, presents a broad canvas of melodramtic romance into which are packed enough thrills and excitement to do for a dozen hair-raising serials.

The rough-and-tumble days of the frontier are resurrected even down to the Indian raid and the holding up of the pay train. Interspersed are the machinations of "big business" paving the way for the "robber marons."

Among the foremast of the players are Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, costarred. Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, the late Lynne Overman, Brian Donlevy, Stanley Ridges, J. M. Kerrigan, Regis Toomey, Lon Chaney, jr., and scores more.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THREE NEW TOPFLIGHTERS. Nan Blakstone, sharper'n a boxful of tacks, is setting Olmsted's Club on its ear twice a night. So eerie are some of the Blakstone gibes that they may set you to thinking nostalgically of the childish innocence of Esquire wisecracks. But ten to one you'll join the wave of frantic paddywhacking for encores. Still, it's in the tragic if gutterish song, "Love for Sale," that you'll see Nan at her rather remarkable best . . . Over at the Windsor Room another lady without inhibitions, Nora Williams, is creating no end of stir with such racy concoctions as "Glamour Ain't for Me" . . . Mayor Ciro of Ciro's Village has found a splendid singer in Salvatore Lupica, who on Sundays is the tenor soloist at St. Patrick's. Salvatore, big, good looking and amiable, does such numbers as "Tango of Roses."

Gen. Paul Etienne Beynet, new head of the French Military Mission, is among the many patrons who seem to have been attracted to the Victory Room by the softly toned and subtly arranged music of Justin Stone.

MYLES HALLETT, whose musical crew opens tonight at El Patio

THOSE NEW SPOTS. The Club Jalna debut, which has been postponed a couple of times, is now hopefully announced for the latter part of this week, maybe as early as Thursday . . . Plans for the opening of the new Tahitian Room at Ruby Foo's have been slowed up and it will probably not be ready for its public bow much before Christmas.

DAMSELS' DOINGS. Friends of pretty Patty Prochnik will gather at the Troika tonight for her birthday party—the third she's celebrated while singing at the Helen Hamilton bistro . . . Jean LaRue, thrush of Restaurant "400," is going to Detroit next weekend. Just a family visit . . . Kay Allen, with Carlos Molina's band at Del Rio, is doing herself right proud with a new arrangement of "Stormy Weather" . . . Georgia of the Anchor Room is looking for a wailing wall—or a new partner. Because Jerry will be in khaki December 1. They'll close at Anchor on November 27 . . . Unabelle Howard is designing fresh costumes and routines for her really charming dancing "line" at the Casino Royal . . . Sloe eyed Lorrie Lamm of Hi Hat looks Carmenish in a red 'n' gold sweater and ankle strap red shoes . . . The pet name of Betty McHugh with Bill Grassick's band in the Metronome Room is "Miss Mac" . . . A flock of cute Canadian WACS favor the good times at Kavakos' Grill . . . Carole Page of the Mayflower Lounge looked like a valentine in ice blue tulle with fat pink roses in her hair . . . Dancer Barbara Blaine, said to look like a Vargas girl, will open at Paul Young's tomorrow . . . Martha Madison, accordionist, who played at the Louisiana when it was called the Flagship, leaves town Thursday on a USO tour . . . Singing tricks of Elaine Moore of the King Cole Room resemble those of the spot's former star, Eve Knight, who's now in the top brackets in New York . . . Marian Carl of the Old New Orleans has a new song, "Just Plain Lonesome." She learned it from a pair of customers.

Duke Ellington will play a concert in Uline's Arena on December 6. It'll be a replica of his Carnegie Hall concert of last January when he presented his concerto, "Black, Brown and Beige."

BANDSTAND ECHOES. Mike Fera, who liiks like "Manjo Eyes" Eddy Cantor, is the handy man for Carr van Sickler's band at the Madrillon. He plays bass, celeste, piano and clowns . . . Tommy Suiter, new leader at Cafe Caprice, goes for "My Heart Tells Me," new tune from "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" . . . Tony Lanasa of the Dubonnet Room sang on WCAP, Washington's first radio station . . . Maestro Harold Nagel of the Carlton almost became a rayon mill executive before the lorelei call of the niteries became too insistent . . . The dead were C. L. Wollard of Steubenville, Ohio, engineer; Sylvia Weber, 37; Wilma Downing and Iola Schoulat, all employed at the Curtiss-Wright airplane plant.

Money In Trust

By Roger W. Babson

Change In Laws Needed

First let me speak a good word for the trust companies and other banks which are taking care of trust funds. So far as the law permits they are doing a good job. Many more parents and grandparents should establish trust funds for those who are to follow. "Shrouds do have pockets." To die without a will is a calamity. Leave your children something outright, but also be sure to put something in trust for them. Do it today.

People fail to realize how the market is being cleaned up of good bond issues. Outstanding bond issues are being redeemed or reduced rapidly and very few new bond issues are being put out. This accounts for the rapid increase in prices of preferred stocks, while common stocks are remaining stagnant. Trustees are being forced either to buy stocks or else Government bonds for their beneficiaries. Certainly, there is no sense of paying banks to invest in Government bonds! A few wise trustees are hedging by buying investment trust securities, fire insurance stocks and chain store company preferreds.

My appeal today, however, is not so much to the banks and trustees as to my readers. The fact is that the banks may be tied down too much by State laws regarding the investment of trust funds. In view of impending inflation, instead of all these laws protecting widows and orphans, some of them may be penalizing these deserving beneficiaries. Surely, if we are going into a period of inflation, certain stocks may be safer than the very best of bonds.

Another thing: Trust funds are growing at a tremendous rate. So far as the beneficiaries are concerned, this is a good thing; but is it good for the community? Owing to State laws regarding trust funds, trustees are frightened of their shadows. Hence, they put no money into new enterprises to help the community or the Nation. This is bad practice. A dog cannot live indefinitely by chewing his own tail. A country cannot survive without continually putting new money into new enterprises. State laws should compel trustees to put 10 per cent of their money into "venture capital."

We should encourage thrift, and the best way to encourage thrift is to give a fair interest rate to those who will save. Interest is merely a wage paid for sacrifice and saving. The Administration at Washington, however, is apparently following a direct opposite program. It has forbidden banks to pay interest on current deposits; and it has beaten down the interest rates on Government bonds. The high tax rates have forced the prices of municipal bonds to sky-high figures so that thrifty people can no longer afford to buy these. While the farmers are demanding a floor for farm prices, the widows and orphans of the country should have a lobby and get a floor under interest rates.

The most honest and safe method of getting security for old age is by saving money and taking care of it either directly oneself or by putting it into a revokable trust fund. The present Social Security program of the U. S. Government is questionable. Why? Because the money which is taken out of your pay envelope every week is not "saved" for you by Washington, but is spent by the Government which gives you only a credit on its books.

Another thing you can do is this: When making a new trust for your family or relatives, insist that the money shall be invested in securities netting at least 4 per cent or 2 per cent above the current rate for U. S. Government bonds maturing after 20 years. I think you will find banks willing to take trusts under these conditions provided you agree that they shall not be held liable for losses by following such a policy.

You should also stipulate that you will look to the bank only for the total valuation of your trust account allowing the bank to use profits to balance losses which, under present legislation, often cannot be done.

Subsidy Ban Sure to Pass, Leaders Say

By Don Cook
New York Tribune, Inc.

Approval by Congress of anti-subsidy legislation scheduled for House action late this week was predicted yesterday by leaders on both sides of the fight, with the added agreement that the majority in the House may be better than two-thirds, and that Administration forces in the Senate are in even worse shape in efforts to defeat the measure.

In the face of such overwhelming opposition, President Roosevelt's supporters in the battle have received assurance from the President that he will veto the measure when it reaches the White House. The farm bloc, it was learned last night, was approached several days ago by the Administration leadership in the House with a suggestion to compromise at this point, rather than wait till the bill rebounds from Mr. Roosevelt's desk, but flatly rejected all such suggestions.

Admitting that the veto probably will be sustained, Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan, who generally speaks for farm sentiment, declared: "When it comes back vetoed, we will talk over compromise at that time."

Representative Wolcott's position was backed up in the Senate by Sen. Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, who at first forecast unequivocal Senate rejection of the food-subsidy program, and then asserted: "You can't compromise with evil. What the devil is there to compromise about? You are either for subsidies or you are against them."

GOP Will Get Time to Reply To LaGuardia

New York, Nov. 14 (INS).—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, under fire all week because of his "political" broadcast last Sunday over the city radio station, WNYC, announced during today's broadcast over the station that the Republicans will be given time on WNYC next Sunday to answer him.

The Mayor's announcement followed his reading over the air of a letter from FCC Chairman James L. Fly, in which Fly, in response to a request from LaGuardia for a ruling as to whether his talk last Sunday was political in nature, said he thought the Mayor's language "somewhat accusatory."

Fly thereupon suggested that the mayor allot ten minutes to a Republican spokesman on the WNYC city hall broadcast to answer LaGuardia's remarks. The contention was that the mayor had made an unwarranted accusation against the local Republican Party in blaming it for the election early this month of former Magistrate Thomas Aurelio to the Supreme Court. Aurelio himself previously had been accused of winning his nomination with the help of Frank Costello, former convict and slot-machine king.

Tonight, Republican County Chairman Thomas J. Curran said he would accept the mayor's invitation to speak over WNYC next Sunday, but Curran also declared he would speak over Radio Station WHN tomorrow night as planned. Whatever of the mayor's allegations he doesn't have time to answer tomorrow, said Curran, he will answer on WNYC.

Fly's letter to the mayor was received yesterday morning but LaGuardia didn't open it until his broadcast today.

The Best People are wearing them this year!

"MY error, Jeeves. It's no wonder I forgot my striped trousers. This underwear is so warm I didn't realize I was only half dressed. And It's just as comfortable indoors as it is in the freezing temperature outside.

"This union suit is so different from the ones I wore when I was knee high to a grasshopper. Then, my longies bunched up around my waist, poked out at my knees, pulled thru my coat sleeves and bulged around my ankles. Remember those days? But no more like that in this modern, scientific age.

"I've got to hand it to Reis and Duofold. They know how to make underwear as streamlined as a flying fortress. It fits like your own skin and has plenty of stretch. Yet always snaps back to its original shape. No bulging anywhere.

"All right, Jeeves. You can now take my coat and hand me the trousers. I'm on my way to the Embassy. Freezing is out for the duration with my wardrobe full of Reis and Duofold underwear. I'm bound to keep warm this winter."
